WON'T FORGET

Something you won't forget. Indeed. From the cold winters to the hot summers, from the glitzy look of the city to our small urban campus, the memories of Northeastern University will never fade. We toiled through five long years and survived, as warriors against a stern concrete jungle. We faced the problems that plague the inner city and created a temporary haven for ourselves. This is the final journey on what has been a spectacular college career. Enjoy the breathtaking experiences all over again.

*Qu*adulating. NU gave us the perfect place to hang out - right in the center of campus.

The parks. Too much green and water never hurt the psyche. The Boston Common answered our desires for a country-like setting.

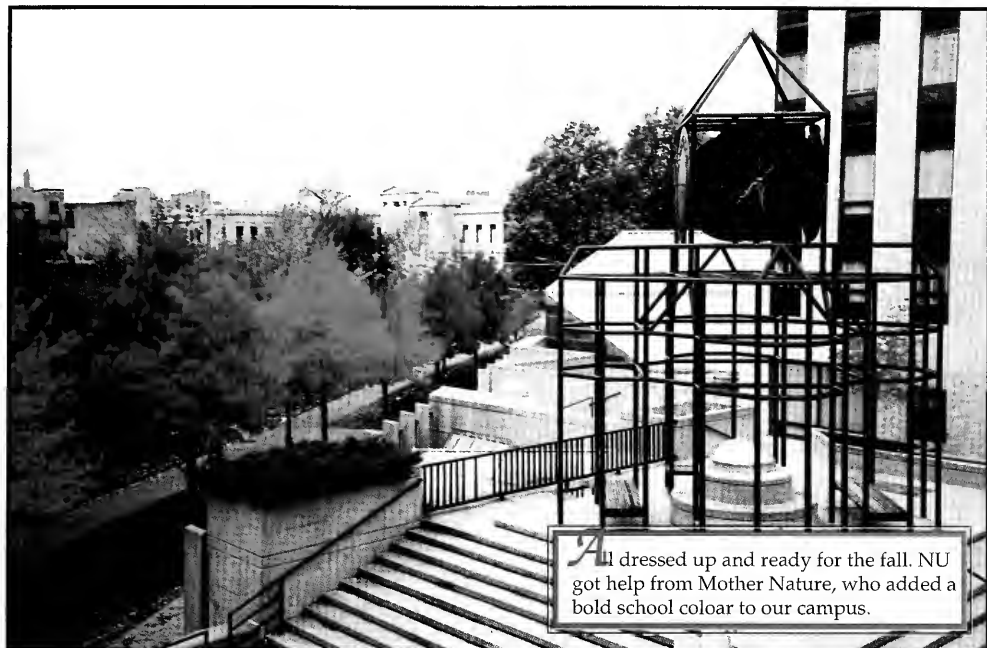

Trademark landmark - The Prudential Center was the centerpiece of our campus' backdrop and also a focal point for those poor lost souls who tried to stumble home late at night from other parts of the city.

Character. While concrete doesn't command attention, it nonetheless sets a riveting tone. It beams of hard work and a solid foundation. Each piece makes the whole stronger. And when the finishing touches of foliage and groundwork are added properly, a dull campus becomes an ornate labyrinth. It may not be paradise, but it produces a wonderment and excitement all its own, and provides an unforgettable backdrop for our University.

*A*ll dressed up and ready for the fall. NU got help from Mother Nature, who added a bold school colour to our campus.

*D*espite its concrete exterior, Kariotis Hall was one of few buildings on campus with character.

Personality. Like the citizens of Boston, Northeastern students have enmeshed in them a blue-collar streak. Far from the spoils of the countryside, our urban souls sweat and toil for every opportunity, grasping the moment while looking toward the future. We've felt pain and love in the same breath and clung together as one University through the harshest of times. Here is something we definitely won't forget - each other.

Neon nights. Tourists and those who've never been to Boston see only one side. They marvel at Boston's history and its 18th century architecture, but leave behind one of the city's best assets - nightlife. Our college experience would have been replete were it not for Tower Records staying open past midnight and over 100 bars staying open past 1 a.m. Not to mention many of the movie theaters, comedy clubs, pizza places and Quincy Market shops which catered to us late night.

Viewing the city as night sets in - a truly magnificent sight.

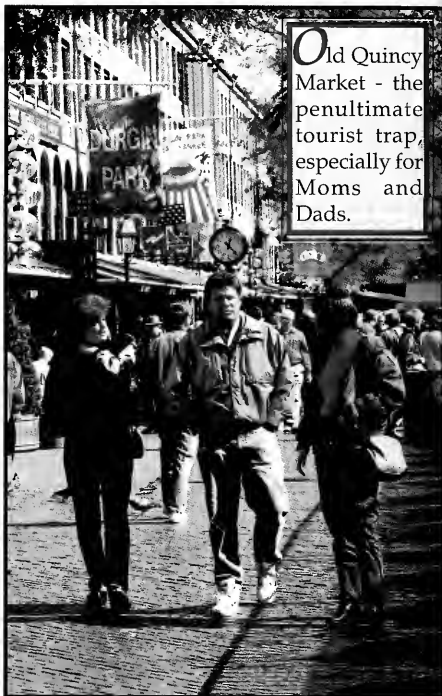

Jim Korman

A passerby enjoys a stroll past the Christian Science Center Fountain.

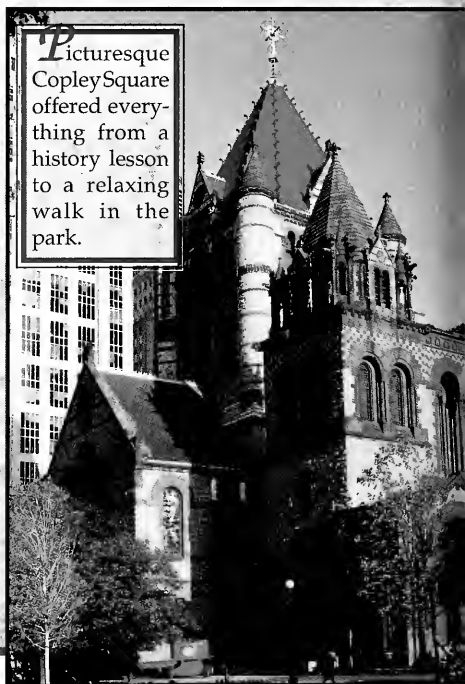

Metropolitan Magic. Despite all the violence, the pollution, noise and cold personalities, Boston provides a soothing warmth like no other city in America. The historical mixes with the modern in a truly phenomenal crescendo. From the towering skyscrapers to the brick-lain streets of the Back Bay, Boston is an architectural marvel for which we had a post-card-like view each day.

DaVor

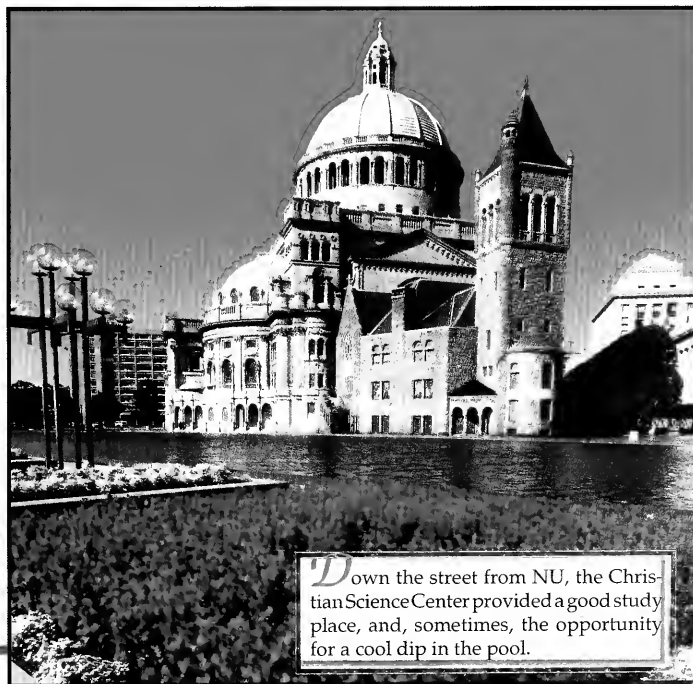

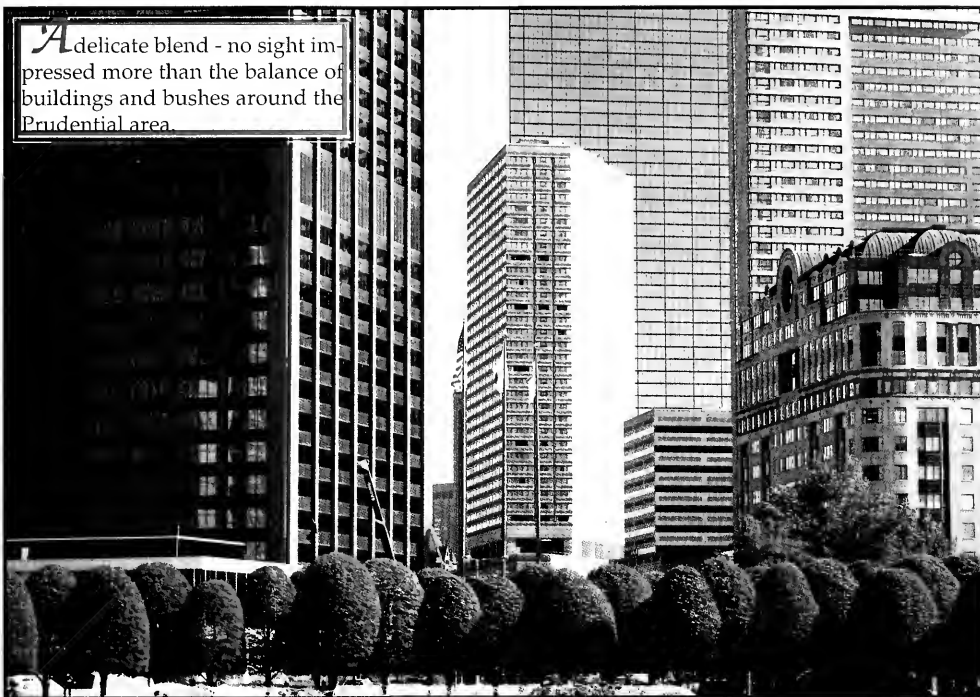

Old Quincy Market - the penultimate tourist trap, especially for Moms and Dads.

DaVor

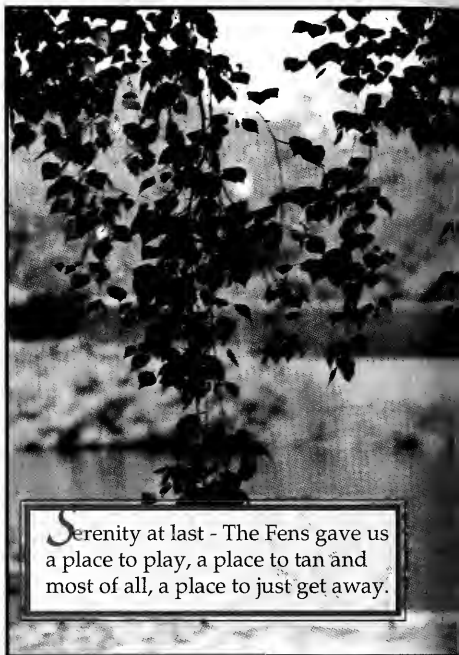

Picturesque Copley Square offered everything from a history lesson to a relaxing walk in the park.

To dream. Although far removed from the wildlife that covers much of New England, the city's surroundings lifted us back into a natural habitat of sorts. Green grass and foliage somehow splashed itself through the maze of streets and skyscrapers. While campus provided little solace for the nature lover, the city came through, easing our minds and calming our stressful lives with periodic deviations from the norm.

DaVior

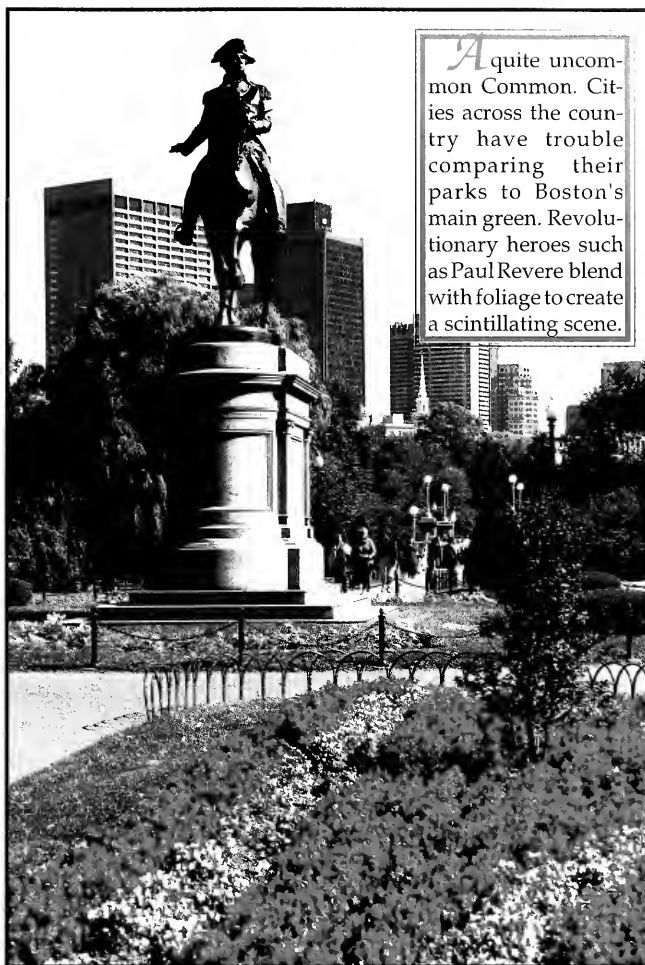

Serenity at last - The Fens gave us a place to play, a place to tan and most of all, a place to just get away.

Not a bad backdrop, eh? But the foreground is what captivated us most. Trees and green grass. Not too often did we get a chance to enjoy them.

DeVior

A quite uncommon Common. Cities across the country have trouble comparing their parks to Boston's main green. Revolutionary heroes such as Paul Revere blend with foliage to create a scintillating scene.

DeVior

A stroll in the park? The Fens was always the place to be.

CAMPUS LIFE

We only had 55 acres of plush concrete to work with, but we certainly made the most of it. Academics always came first, but more important issues always seemed to barge into our lives, like partying, going out to eat or just hitting the area in search of shopping. Though campus provided us with our own wonderful moments, it also challenged our patience and limits. Here's a look at some of those unforgettable sagas.

SOMETHING TO DRINK ABOUT

TAPPING THE KEG - A NORTHEASTERN PASTIME

All Photos by Kim Pelletier

There were no great big frat houses or rolling hills to stumble across late at night, but that didn't stop NU students from partying until they dropped.

In fact, none of the local bars (i.e. Maxwell's, Our House, Punters) had designated student nights, so boozehounds made it their place from Wednesday through Saturday, and almost always on Sunday and Monday holidays. There wasn't a bar that wasn't jumpin' and there wasn't a student who could claim he or she was never face down at least once in their five years.

Part of the NU experience was, after all, learning how to imbibe. From freshman kegs to 18-and-over nights to bar hopping, Husky students pushed liquor to the limit and often, it was not a pleasant experience.

The reason for all the endless swilling? Well, five years in a city doesn't exactly put a student at ease. Co-ops were tough work for some of us. And school sucked, especially with the pressure of a mindless 10-week quarter constantly barreling down our throats. We just needed an elixir to soothe a dry larynx.

U. U. U. U. U.

So, what were our favorite drinks? We blue-collar folk like our $1.75 Knickerbockers luke warm, thank you. Oh, and that $8-a-case Golden Anniversary always worked to loosen the bowels. Mixed drinks were never really in vogue, but shots and bottles were, from Absolut to Peachtree Schnapps to 151. Most of the time, though, anything that was either free, stolen from somebody's fridge, or delivered to the front door by Keg King was good for us. We weren't picky, and after four or five, we didn't care anyway.

Don't want you to think that all we did was drink. But more liquid probably passed through us than the Panama Canal from

'89-'94. Most of you probably don't remember all the time you wasted away in those bars.

But you probably still feel the hangovers. That's something you won't forget. We all have Maxwell's and Our House to thank for keeping us strapped to the chairs until 2 a.m. for last call. Good thing we never had to drive.

FASHION STATEMENT?

NU STUDENTS GET TOTALLY REBELLIOUS

A lost generation a really lost generation.

Parents, old-timers, school teachers and just about every elder spokesperson in the country figured they had us pegged. We were a lost generation, an MTV generation, one which reeked of a cluelessness to the world and an ignorance to the past. Maybe they were right. Just look at our clothing.

In vogue this was not. By 1993, we were back with Jan Brady and David Cassidy, wearing straight hair, bellbottoms and tacky plaids. About the only things we left behind from the 70's were the polyester and the Partridge Family Bus. We even took back the sideburns. Man, what were we thinking.

For some reason, though, we had style, or at least we thought we did. We traded in the 80's ripped jeans for baggy jeans. We got rid of big, ironboard hairsprayed hair for straight, neatly parted hair. We also invented the grunge look, inspired by groups like Nirvana, and sported Doc Martin shoes and boots, which often looked more dorky than those rubber-soled shoes Mom made us wear in elementary school.

Women brought back platform shoes and clogs. They must have had a reason, although heels and flats looked fine just the way they were. Flannels also made a brief comeback. We were dressed to kill, if not to go out and party, then to secure that all-important final Halloween bag.

As freshmen we entered the college world with caution. Jeans, plain T-shirts and sweats were the conservative attire. An occasional polo shirt or rugby was O.K. too. By senior year, however, goutees littered the faces of men, women went back to pencil-thin eyebrows and chokers, and the persona of students had changed from crowd-followers to rebels.

Despite sporting the look of a lost generation, we carried the spirit of a generation more in tune and much more conscious to the world than anyone could have imagined, platform shoes or not.

SMASHING NEW LOOK

CAMPUS CONCRETE GETS A MAJOR FACELIFT

The tour group stopped just outside of Churchill Hall. About a dozen or so prospective freshmen looked at the surroundings. The guide began talking about the new library and about campus improvements. One of the kids whispered to his father, "Campus? Is this it? What kind of improvements did they make? This place is a dump."

If he only knew.

We came through NU's gates in the nick of time. Any sooner, and we would have been engulfed by the billowing Ell Center cigarette smoke, an overflowing bookstore or the darkness that boomed over the Ell Dining Room. Not to mention the maze of white brickface towering over us at every turn. We got a taste of that. The campus was not pretty.

As one of his many promises to the university, John Curry put campus improvement at the top of his list. And in the five years that we patrolled NU's concrete jungle, we watched an unbelievable transformation take place. By 1992, we were given a national award by First Lady Barbara Bush for the most improved urban campus in the country.

As sophomores, we saw the construction of the largest college library in New England. In its dust was left the remains of Dodge Library, a study dungeon for only those brave enough to endure its 110-degree temperatures.

We moved into middleddom, and WHOA!!!! That concrete jungle suddenly had green things sprouting from it.

Grass and leaves and squirrels rustled by our feet. Suddenly, the cinders were ashed and the rats were sent scurrying to a new haven on Westland Ave. next to the Stop & Shop.

As juniors, everything on campus was Gliddened. Matthews Arena and the Uptown Garage got a lovely tan painting. And, in a major spruce-up job, massive red signs went on every white-bricked building, helping students find their classrooms (for once), the gym and their dorms.

We became seniors, and they rolled out the red carpet, right out the side of the Ell Center. And there it was. A brand spanking new dining area, filled with leafy plants, new tables, and a new ... Pizza Hut. So what if we had a bookstore with 78 panes of glass. In living neon was Pizza Hut. This was it!! Doesn't take much to make a kid happy. Now if we could only get a real football stadium built

HOMECOMING ...

STUDENTS CELEBRATE DESPITE RAIN, TOUGH LOSS

Homecoming was sort of a strange phenomenon at Northeastern. Unlike Michigan, Notre Dame, and even Boston College, parents did not jet across the country to visit their sons and daughters for what was termed a football extravaganza weekend. And even if they did, the football game wasn't always where most ended up.

For the few who did attend the festivities, though, it was always a good time. The pep rally and parade down Huntington Avenue pushed forth some school spirit seen only at tournament basketball games and the Beanpot. The tailgating was a blast, and even watching the football team became in vogue after a 1992 demolition of Rhode Island.

To the 7,000 strong who partied and braved a soggy October afternoon, our hats go off to you. To those who remained for the end of the football game in the water-laden bleachers, you were truly spirited.

What a football game you saw. Our Huskies pounded the ball at UMass for three quarters for a 17-7 edge. Then the floodgates opened, however, and UMass surged for 14 points in the final quarter to knock us off.

As usual the festivities outdid the game. A special thanks to all those who put in countless hours to make it happen. And congratulations to Steve Nuzzolo, who was named Mayor of Huntington Ave. and Melissa Buckley, NU's homecoming queen.

ANGLED WEB THEY WOVE

RED TAPE MADE COPING NEAR IMPOSSIBLE

Just before senior year started, you found you had a problem ... or at least that's what Financial Aid told you. "We don't remember getting any loan check for you this year." You responded, "That's funny because I have a copy of the loan check right here."

Then housing called. That room you requested three months ago? Well, they claimed their computers went down and told you they wouldn't know about housing until August 30th, two days before your present lease was to expire.

Then came the trifecta. During Senior Week, you just happened to go to the Bursar's Office to make sure everything was peachy with them so you could get the hell out of NU for good. "Well, it seems we're missing $3,000 from you." You said, "That's impossible." You checked all the items and it seems they missed out on a federal grant, some $3,000 worth. You called the federal grant company and they said, "It's in Northeastern's hands."

Derek Matson

U. WON'T FORGET U. WON'T FORGET U. WON'T FORGET U. WON'T FORGET

Great. In Northeastern's hands. Just the place you didn't want it to be.

It wasn't bad enough, the standing in line at 6:30 a.m. to sign up for classes that you never got. It wasn't even that bad that Financial Aid sent you to the Bursar's Office, who sent you to the Cashier who sent you to Student Loans.

Nope. It was the $3,000 miscalculations or the lack of any semblance of common sense that disturbed you the most.

The good thing was that you weren't the only one. Chances are, there were often 250 other students waiting with you at Add/Drop and another 20 or more who couldn't understand why you had to go all the way to another building on another floor to pay two bucks for a transcript.

Red tape was all around and it usually tangled all of us.

The housing department was the best. During the summer of '93 when they couldn't figure out who was living

AT NORTHEASTERN,

In today's competitive world, more and more Northeastern students are out there making a name for themselves. And so is the University. In fact, U.S. News and World Report recently ranked Northeastern's law school fourth best in the nation for its clinical training program. In The Ultimate Guide: Top Business Schools, our Graduate School of Business Administration was selected as one of New England's five best, along with Harvard, Dartmouth and MIT. And Science magazine listed Northeastern in the top 25 U.S. universities in number of research citations in the physical sciences.

Northeastern University is also among the top 25 nationally in dollars awarded for contract research in electrical engineering. (In New England, we're second only to MIT.) And over the last three years, the amount of research grants awarded to Northeastern has actually doubled.

This year, Professor Martin Lavee's distinguished work with the deaf earned him one of 31 international MacArthur Foundation "genius" grants. And sociologist Jack Levin was chosen Massachusetts professor of the year. Students in our physician assistant program placed fourth in the nation on their board exams. And 14 of our physics researchers were chosen to be part of a $500 million experiment at the world's most powerful atom smasher.

So we're making big news these days at Northeastern. And in the midst of it all, we're maintaining our personal commitment to each and every student. That's why our class sizes are so small: 70% of the undergraduate classes at Northeastern have 30 or fewer students. That's also why we're the world leader in cooperative education, an individualized work-study program that gives students one-on-one contact not only with professors, but with professionals in their chosen field. Which is probably why 93% of our recent graduates are satisfied with the career preparation their Northeastern education gave them.

Add it all up, and you'll see why so many achievement-oriented individuals are studying, teaching, working and prospering at Northeastern University.

where, they broke down to the point that when students called, they told them that "the power was out because of the hurricane last week." Ironically, that hurricane never made it past North Carolina and there was never a power outage near NU. They also moved their office to Speare Hall and changed the office name in the Eli Building to the Housing Department. The office at Speare was now Residential Life. All this for only $575 a month. Pardon me, I'd rather live off campus.

There were class conflicts, seating conflicts every night at Matthews, MAC usage conflicts, Gym hour conflicts, conflicts with overbearing proctors, and every other bureaucratic conflict imaginable.

Guess we couldn't expect perfection from one of the largest schools in the country. But then again, $3,000 was a bit much to ask.

SEXUALLY SPEAKING...

A PAIR OF NU PERSPECTIVES ON STEAMY

Derek Matson

THE SERIOUS, PARANOID SIDE

While standing in line, I looked around quickly. Surveying the store, I see no recognizable faces. Then, an old dorm-mate walks in. Or was it? I can't really tell. Maybe it's just nerves. Do I recognize the girl behind the counter? God, I think I know her. Is this worth it?

This paranoia overwhelms me here at CVS. On the walk down Mass Ave. I think I ignored three kids from my Statistical Thinking class. And I ducked into Economy Hardware, just to be sure I wasn't seen. Now I have in my hands a soda, some shampoo, this week's Sports Illustrated... and condoms. This condom-buying makes me nervous, but it's worth it. Must be safe, absolutely certain everything is all right. But God am I nervous.

I'm nervous later, after doing the thing I bought the condoms for. Jeez, was it good? Is she OK? Did the condom break? Good Lord I hope not. This isn't just a Maxwell's hook-up. We've been together for a while. There is nothing to worry about... I think. (I hope.)

Across the page, you will read about how fun and good and exciting sex is. While it may be these things, it is also scary and stressful. Even just laying the groundwork for sex (meeting someone, going out, etc.) is nerve-racking. By the time you reach the "big moment" you are on all-out stress levels.

There is so much responsibility in sex, and it all revolves around two issues: disease and pregnancy. No one wants to get sick, and at this precious stage in our lives we don't want her to get pregnant. This is what causes the stress of sex.

Yeah, I wore a condom, but what if it broke? What if something — anything!! — happened? What if the fish swim? What if I have something and don't know it? What if she does? What will happen to her? What will happen to us? All these questions to ask, and none of them can be answered.

Always expecting her first words to be "I'm late" can be a pretty big stress-producer. All the questions about each other's past — what happened back then? Are we healthy now? All it does is make us more nervous than before.

I'm next in line. The guy in front of me bought a candy bar and a Boston Globe (pretty generic). The woman behind me has lipstick and soap (very generic). I have the one thing that stands out. I can "feel" everyone looking at me. But I have to do this, I have to be safe and responsible — and worry later that it wasn't enough.

Yeah, sex can be fun and enjoyable (see Ms. Irresponsible, opposite), but is it worth it? As I stand next in line — ready for embarrassment — I'm not so sure. Maybe I'll head for the Walgreen's on Boylston ... no one knows me there.

AND SAFE SEX

THE CARE-FREE, LIGHTS ON SIDE

Any woman who loves sex can tell you ... if it's good, you want it regardless of whether or not you're in love.

It's all a matter of seduction. If you know how to give him that look, if you have a way of turning your face up to his that drives him crazy, then you've got him. There are a million ways to seduce a man. Especially if you're not shy.

Why be shy when being loud can get you want? Loud ... Find out if that gets him going. This is important, almost crucial to good sex, because it's easy enough to get into it when it's good. And if he thinks you're into it, he'll try harder. Things will only get better (and harder) from there.

Men are easy to fool ... especially the macho, too-tough-to-be-emotional men who live on the fantasy that women stare at them whenever they walk into Punter's. These are the ones that are no conquest at all, because they are also under the delusion that they are experts at the art of sex. Their gaggle of high school Glamour-don'ts never happened to mention that they were awful. That's a shame, because although these men are (usually) hot, there is no use in bringing them to bed. They just don't know what to do once they get there. And half the time, if you find them at Punter's, they're too drunk to do anything but throw up.

The worst part is, they are too macho to let you give them a how-to lesson. Useless.

The ultimate winners, as far as "Take-me-home-and-do-what-you-will-with-me" men go, are the sweet ones with the cherub faces that sit in the corner of your classroom. They always admire the way the fluorescent lights make your hair glow, and the way you drink your iced tea out of a straw ... you can't even imagine the pictures this will put in his head. And if you give him the chance, he will obligingly, patiently make those fantasies a consummate reality in your boudoir.

There is nothing wrong with this. Although, you do need to be a little more sensitive to his needs ... and you run the risk of his becoming EMOTIONALLY INVOLVED. That is a definite drawback. Find another time to tell him you're not ready for the flowers and the diamond. Or at least wait until the afterglow has ... dried off the sheets.

CULINARY DISASTER ...

HOT DOGS AND STUDENTS TURN GREEN

Feast your eyes.

It's one day after sign-in freshman year and one day after devouring the first dorm meal with your parents. You recall the spread they laid out that first evening - a mouthwatering turkey dinner with cranberry sauce, stuffing, potatoes, lasagne and salad.

And here you are, ready for round two. You look at the menu and it hasn't changed. Not so bad. Leftovers like that would suit any college kid.

With fork and tray in hand, you plunge your way to the front of the line, shoving aside football players and checking hockey players, ready for the heaping mounds ... Yes, heaping mounds. And they get piled on your plate. You look at them and have no idea what they are, except that they are heaping mounds of something. You sniff. No smell (probably because tofu has no smell). You dig in. And your fork stops dead at the week six, we had food poisoning. All this for only seven bucks a meal.

The Crunch Berries went very fast as did the Frosted Flakes. Even the Cheerios were gone. Things got so bad, in fact, that the ice cream cones went, despite the fact that often there was no ice cream left to go in them.

By the end of freshman year, the only things that were consistently emptied were the soda machines, the cereal bins in the back of the cafeteria and the dish and silverware section, which were stolen by students who figured they might as well get their $7 worth if they weren't going to eat.

Students got smarter as the first quarter went on and those green dogs remained in a lake of algae at the head of the line. Students got even smarter by the end of the year, cutting that meal plan from 21 to 7 per week and using all the money at Smith Hall to buy Spaghettios and Pop Tarts. STRANGER IN MY BEDROOM

MY TERRIBLE, HORRIBLE, NO-GOOD, VERY

Verne Gordon

After a long night of work, I turned the corner of Forsyth and Greenleaf on my way to 10:30 class. Up ahead, I saw him. I was in no mood to speak, period — especially to him. It had been almost four years, maybe he wouldn't recognize me, maybe he wouldn't want to talk. Maybe I could get away with a quick "How ya' doin'" and continue to stumble on to class.

It didn't happen.

My freshman-year roommate stopped and decided he wanted to chat. He decided to take this most horrendous opportunity to catch up on old times.

Sure, I was a bit cranky. Sure, I was a bit unsociable. Sure, I was most definitely perturbed. But I have my reasons. To wit:

When I moved to this fair campus in the Fall of 1989 we lived in a more innocent age. Diane was still on "Cheers," and there was a waiting list for university housing (rumor has it there is one now — go figure). My original roommate never made it to glorious NU, and in his place was a boy/man who had been in the United States approximately two hours when I first met him.

U. WON'T FORGET U. WON'T FORGET U. WON'T FORGET U. WON'T

By Columbus Day, I knew it was going to be a long haul. His musical taste ran from Madonna to Kylie Minogue (remake of "Locomotion" — only I truly remember because of the pure uselessness of it). He bought pants that didn't fit (he didn't know pants have lengths here in America), and he wallpapered a corner of the room with pin-ups (not only did Mom disapprove, but it left room to question what happened when all the good boys and girls went to sleep).

It's not that he was a bad roommate, he just wasn't a good one. He wasn't even a fair one. OK, he was a bad one.

He watched Star Trek a lot, and he picked fights with this guy named "Sarge," who wore a black jacket all the time, climbed out fifth-floor windows and broke mirrors.

My roommate drank five vodka shots in 10 minutes and threw up out the window. My roommate tried to live this one down, until the photos of him leaning over various receptacles (including the sidewalk) were produced. My roommate told a friend his girlfriend was ugly. This got him a punch in the nose (well-deserved, she wasn't bad looking), and the enduring hatred of my friend.

BAD ROOMMATE.

Shelagh Braley

Bad things happened to my live-in goof after that. Shaving cream in the shoe, missing pens and textbooks and a mixture of Tide, Windex and furniture cleaner put in his shampoo were all inflicted on my roommate (not too bad, considering he was short-sheeted on his second night in our fine country).

The finale came when he interrupted college hoops. Georgetown-Syracuse. This was when it meant something (I told you this was an innocent age). Hoops turned off for Star Trek. Billy Owens and Dikembe Mutombo switched for Kirk and Spock. No man (or anything else, really) comes between myself and hoops. My roommate moved out within three weeks.

That was it for almost four years. Then I saw him on the street. He said he was going back to Europe after graduation which is fine with me. I hear Kylie Minogue and the Locomotion are really popular there.

HITTIN THE BOOKS

All-Niters, eight cups of coffee, a trip to the library (sneaking in food of course), and busting your brain trying to understand Shakespeare, that engineering assignment or a book on Logic that never seemed all that logical.

Studying. We found out quickly just how important this was to existence at NU. Those who didn't study were soon eliminated from the floors of dorms or sent to other schools. For all the fun we had, there was little time to really sit back and bask in it. Hitting the books wasn't exciting, but it offered knowledge and a ticket to good grades.

DUELING FOR STOOLS

Maxwell's vs. Our House.

The dilemma raged through the minds of students almost every night - where to hang out and party. The choice was made easy as the two campus bars pushed their way past Punter's and into the limelight. Each had its own splendor and each had its, well, negative qualities.

Maxwell's, a converted basement made homey by its exposed brick, was a place for thue partier. The clientele was blue-collar. Beer often splattered the floor and the percentage of stumblers was far higher than that of its counterpart. The main attraction was acoustical whiz Chad LaMarsh on Wednesday's.

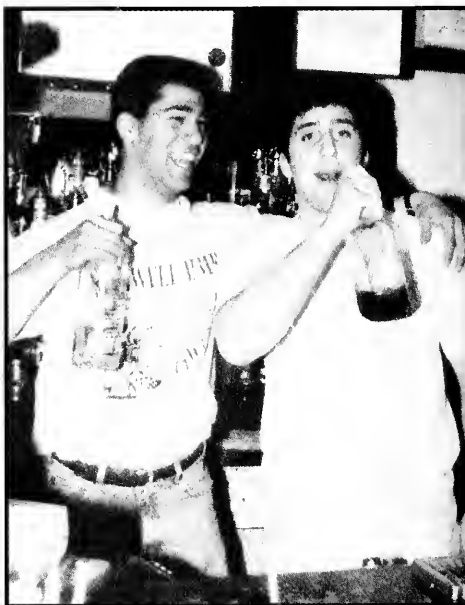

Our House, an upscale, brightly-lit bar catered mainly to those with a sophisticated taste for drinking. Food, karaoke nights and cheap Knicks were keys to keeping the battle raging.

WINTER OF WONDER

It bordered on ridiculous. The 100 inches of snow dumped on Boston in the winter of our senior year was the most the city had ever seen. Thankfully, we dug our way through the massive drifts and frozen terrain. There were those who struggled, however.

Northeastern, which nicely lays claim to the streets in the area (that's why NU so easily forced the canteen trucks off campus), got a major headache from all the snow. NU, forced to find plows to shovel away the white blankets, overstepped its snow removal budget by nearly $100,000. For us, coping wasn't so bad - a few cancelled classes, a nice cover for the concrete. By March, however, we were all just a little sick of it.

PEOPLE WITH POWER

We heard a lot about leaders in their respective fields during our stay at NU. There was Jack Levin, James Fox and Michael Dukakis. But the men with the most clout overall at the University were the ones who dealt most closely with student affairs, not a national television talk show.

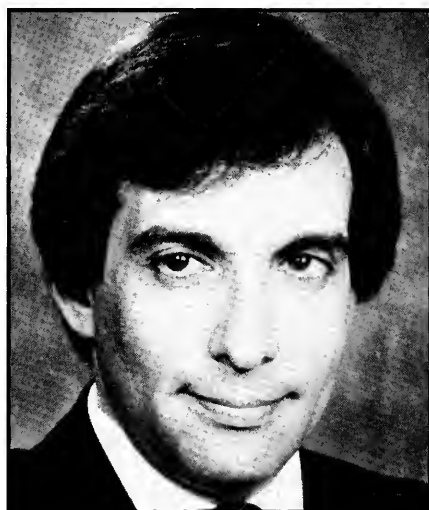

For all the criticism he faced when the speaker was chosen for graduation, President John Curry was outstanding in making sure most of the student's needs were met by helping to improve and beautify the campus and making our institution better academically. Dean of Students Keith Motley was equally as influential both with the students at NU and on a national scope. But there were others too who had a major impact.

BEATING THE STREETS

In the early morning hours on January 15, 1990, Northeastern police got the call. One of NU's own, student Mark Belmore, had been stabbed to death on Columbus Ave. ... 22 times. It was the capper to a very violent freshman year where the Boston streets were filled with gunfire or murder attempts nearly every night.

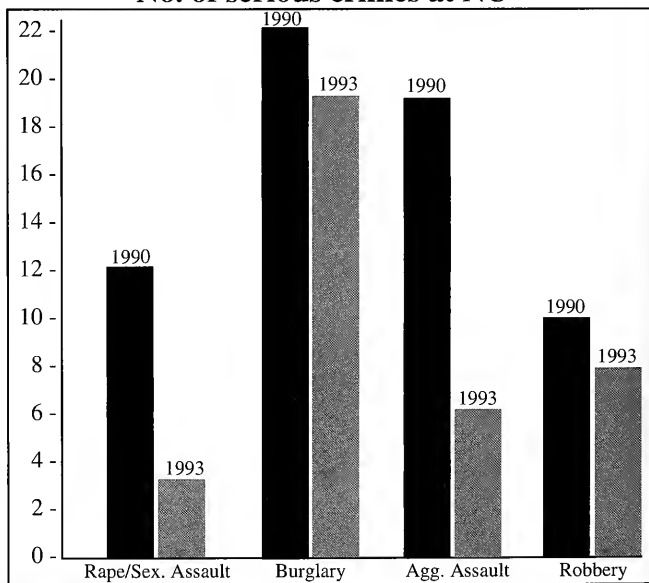

This was what students had feared for a long time. We heard about the muggings. We knew of the dangers of the city. Now it was on our campus. Though NU police denied responsibility for the incident (they claimed it was off-campus) it clearly pushed campus patrols to take a stand.

By 1993, serious campus crimes dropped to 51, down from 69 in 1990.

CENTER OF CHANGE

So you didn't find PAWS all that appealing. And you probably thought the grimy dining area was difficult to bear. Well, thanks to us, the students, we finally got some big-time results done on the Ell Center.

Ready just in time for our senior campaign, the bottom floor of the Ell was gutted, PAWS was replaced with a variety of food places, Club Ell gave way to more open seating areas and big glass windows gave both the dining area and bookstore a magnificent exterior.

As we departed, the Ell Center was scheduled for more renovations, namely the addition of air conditioning, an indoor quad with shops and more space for student groups - a dramatic change from 1989 for sure.

SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

Fenway Park, the Boston Symphony, the Boston Garden, Quincy Market, the Wang Center, the Museum of Fine Arts and the Orpheum just to name a few. When it came to night life or entertainment, we were blessed to be in Beantown.

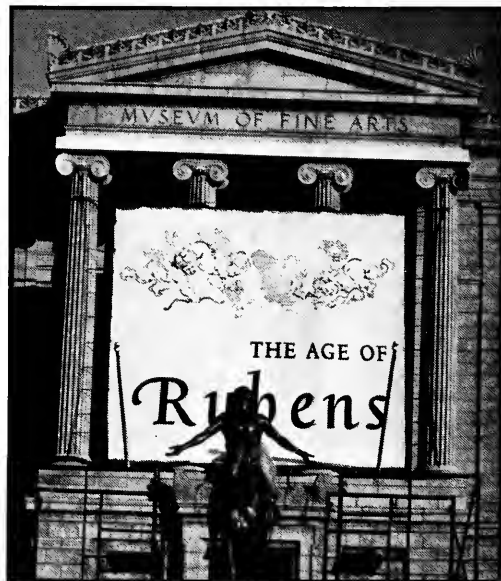

Taking in a concert or game was at our fingertips every day. And many wondered why there was little action surrounding campus. Let's just say we were easily coaxed away from the concrete. We had the chance to witness many memorable events - John Williams' farewell, U2 at the Garden, the Monet exhibit, Martin at the Comedy Connection, The Phantom at the Wang Center, and a few marathons.

DRIVING IN CIRCLES

Northeastern was a commuter's nightmare. After battling traffic on 93 or Storrow Drive, students had to face the land of no parking, no parking spaces and no two-way streets.

Driving around the block a few times became rather regular for the many student-drivers. Fellow commuters were not difficult to spot. They were often late to class because of the lack of sufficient parking and often swearing under their breath at the nightmare of NU's paved roadways.

NU built its own parking garage to help curb some of the problems, but not even that five story structure could suffice. There was always the Uptown Garage and the NU parking lots, but their limited spacing and safety questions still left many searching endlessly for a few metered spaces.

SAFE HAVEN? - The Uptown Garage may not have looked like the nicest place to park, but it actually kept cars very secure.

TOP 10 THINGS TO DO WITH YOUR CAR AT NORTHEASTERN

1. Get it out of the area by nightfall or else.
2. If you find a parking space, make sure to ram your car into both the car in front and back of you for extra room.
3. If you can't find a parking space - 1. double park; 2. wait until the weekend; 3. park it in front of the NU police station and tell them to get one of their many cruisers from out of the fire zones.
4. Steal the radio yourself before someone else does.
5. Call the Boston Police and report it stolen before it gets stolen. This way, by the time they get through all the paperwork and start searching for it, your car will only have been gone a month.
6. Smash it up and put it in the quad with all the other wrecked drunken driving cars.
7. Clip a couple of parking meters so that they finally work when you put quarters in them.
8. Drive down Greenleaf and Leon at 80 miles an hour late at night. Almost everyone else does.
9. Leave enough room for those hungover pedestrians who cross Huntington Ave. near the NU T stop without even looking.
10. Leave all doors unlocked and windows open. Something will get taken inside anyway. Why replace the windows, too.

EMPTY SPACES
- There weren't too many of these to find, and when you could find one, the meters were often disabled.

BUYING AND SELLING

For many area vendors, the quad was an absolute killing ... or an Absolut killing. The money they made from sales of T-shirts like the "Abolut Northeastern", was overwhelming. Everything from jewelry to rollerblades to cassettes and CD's went fast.

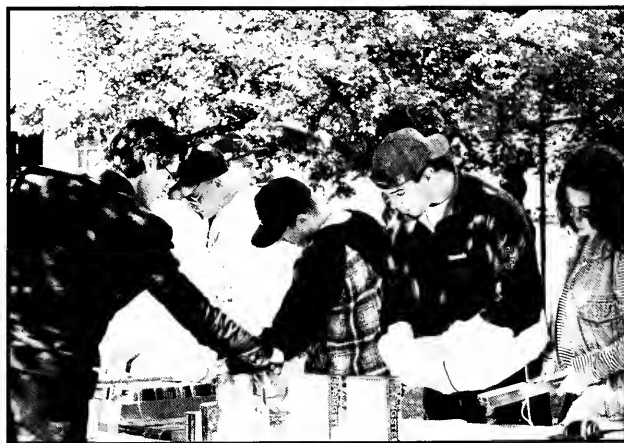

Recall that things got heated over the money issue when vending canteens parked on the street were booted from campus. Guess the administration felt these guys were hoarding too much dough from the Ell Center and Chicken Lou, who bought a polt of land on campus. The truth was these were decent money makers, more than enough to live on.

Some even bothered to get licenses (like the Globe Lady) to sell, though many snuck in and out of dorms.

RIDING THE E-LINE

Elbows, dirty looks and bodychecks aside, the T wasn't a bad way to get around the city. Thankfully, we had one stop right in front of campus (even if it did so only every 20 minutes and often passed right by with a simple toot.)

A ride on the Green Line offered some interesting sights - fights, drunken students from other campuses, and some very unusual advertising, like those put out by Northeastern telling students they would not be just another number if they applied and were accepted.

But graffiti-free, air-conditioned cars proved very suitable for us, especially those of us who experienced New York City transit firsthand.

SPORTS FOR ALL SEASONS

In Boston, the ballet, symphony and shopping all take a backseat to the sports scene. Its heroic figures include Larry Bird, Bobby Orr, Bill Russell, Red Auerbach, Ted Williams, and Carl Yastrzemski. Though Boston suffered through a tough five years, we nonetheless had a chance to view three great traditions - the Celtics, Bruins and Red Sox - along with two of the most legendary stadiums ever built.

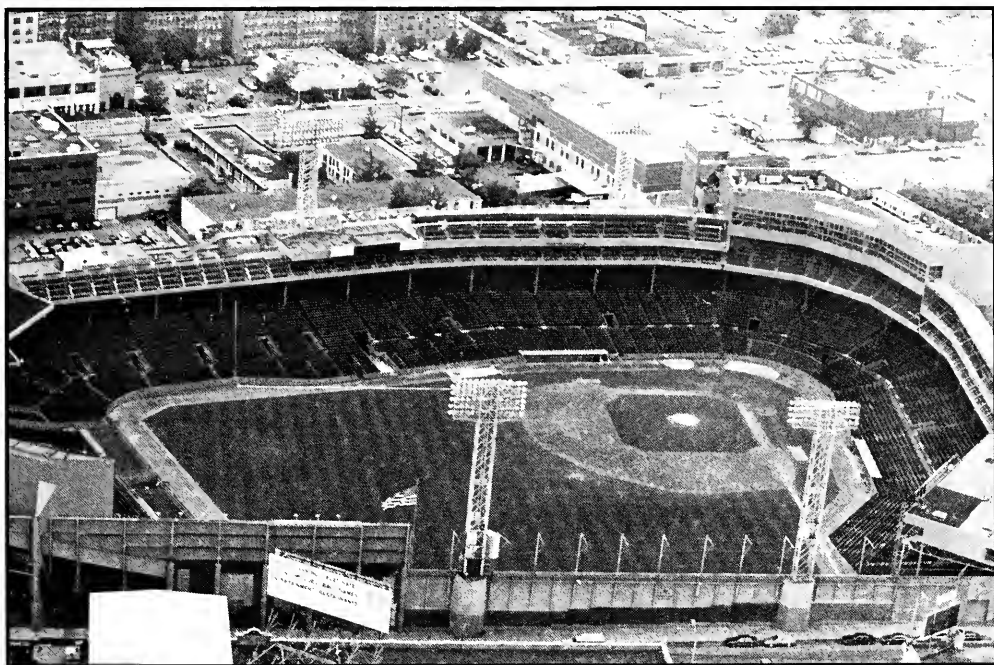

Boston Garden and Fenway Park gave us some memorable moments - Cam Neely's comeback, Mo Vaughn's towering homeruns and Kevin, Larry and Robert together on the Garden parquet. They gave us triumph - victory over the Canadiens in seven games - and tragedy - the night Reggie Lewis collapsed during a game against Charlotte.

CAMPUS WITH CLOUT

Maybe we weren't Harvard, MIT or Stanford, but we did close in on a little national attention now and then, too. Aside from having the President of the United States, Bill Clinton, speak to our 1993 graduating class, we were also fortunate to have several other prominent figures come to campus.

During our senior year, silver medalist Nancy Kerrigan skated at Matthews Arena as part of a tune-up for the Olympic Games. President Aristide of Haiti also came to Matthews that year along with INXS. Some of the other celebrities who came to NU - Jay Leno, Dennis Miller, Dr. Ruth Westheimer, Public Enemy's Chuck D, former First Lady Barbara Bush, Bob Dylan, Gloria Steinem, Jessica Hahn, The Band, Shabba Ranks and Jesse Jackson.

UNIVERSAL CHANGE

Hope for the future. Greater acceptance worldwide of problem issues helped bond many people of many nations. The push for a cleaner environment, the greater acceptance of AIDS as an epidemic disease, and the celebration of hundreds of years of racial strife ending in South Africa with Nelson Mandela's election brought smiles to our faces. There was, however, change which destroyed lives, and the hopes of many trying to build that American Dream. Nationally, no story of disaster was as hard hitting as the floods that ravaged the Midwest.

YEAR OF TRAGEDY

The number of prominent figures who died was staggering. Actor River Phoenix died of a drug overdose, Nirvana lead singer Kurt Cobain committed suicide, and actor John Candy, former first lady Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and former President Richard Nixon all passed away from natural causes. It was a year to forget for many.

SUCCESS ON —THE— SILVER SCREEN

Hollywood became Comeback Central. Tom Hanks hit superstardom as an actor with "Philadelphia." Meg Ryan made a very big splash with "Sleepless in Seattle" and "When a Man Loves a Woman." Robert Redford made a box-office smash with "Indecent Proposal." MacAulay Culkin struck gold with "The Good Son." And Steven Spielberg, always on top of his game, finally grasped his long-coveted academy award for "Schindler's List."

MUSIC FOR THE MASSES

Variety had its advantages. With the grunge craze peaking and the rap culture thriving, the sweet sounds of just about every music medium boomed from bars, clubs and our apartments. Pearl Jam (far right) made the biggest impact. Janet Jackson and Aerosmith's Steven Tyler (bottom) also had giant years. Michael Jackson, on the other hand, bottomed out after rumors spread of his alleged molestation of a young boy.

Their competitive spirit lit up the courts, fields and rinks made our programs No. 1 in the hearts of Husky fans.

KICKING AASS

Soccer blossoms behind forwards Aass, Fjeldstad

The benches were empty.

In 1991, Turi Lonero took over as head coach for Keith Cammidge, who transferred to William & Mary. NU players boycotted the move and left the squad. Lonero suddenly had no team.

But that didn't bother him. Lonero scraped the barrel, petitioned and recruited players who probably never would have worn an NU uniform, just to form a team. Lonero pushed his program, believing every moment he could build a power. In 1993, he got his wish.

With bonafide scoring threats Nils Aass, Marius Fjeldstad, and Bjorn Hansen lighting up opposing goals, the Huskies raced out to a 7-3 record and finished at 10-8, missing out on a post-season tournament bid on the final day of the season.

The year was capped by NU's first three wins in the North Atlantic Conference and frequent appearances in the New England Top 10 Poll, something that Cammidge's past crews couldn't even accomplish.

Aass and Fjeldstad, both transfers from Clemson University who played high school ball together, hooked up for 18 and 13 points, respectively.

Hansen capped a magnificent season by finishing with six goals and four assists in only 14 games played. Heiko Ross and Eric Jackson provided a much needed lift late in the season, propelling NU to three wins in its final four games.

While the Huskies were scoring in bunches, goaltending was the key to the storybook season. Freshman netminder Greg Purnell filled in admirably for the injured Andrew Boyea, posting a 3-0 record, while allowing just two goals in four games. Boyea rebounded to finish with a 5-2 mark and a stunning 1.08 goals against average.

STICKING TO SCRIPT

Field Hockey puts together another winning season

Kelly Wilk, Brenda Mitchell, Deb Sweeney.

The Huskies were certainly blessed with this trio. Wilk was a two-time All-American, Mitchell was the school's best goalie and Sweeney became NU's all-time leading scorer. By 1993, however, all of them had graduated.

That left NU without a lot of offense and a lot of leadership.

So, for the first time in five years, Northeastern did not reach the NCAA tournament.

Despite not having its top trio, the Huskies produced a surprisingly strong season, finishing 17th in the country at 12-10. NU lost several heartbreakers to Top 10 squads, including a 1-0 defeat to BU in the North Atlantic Conference tournament final.

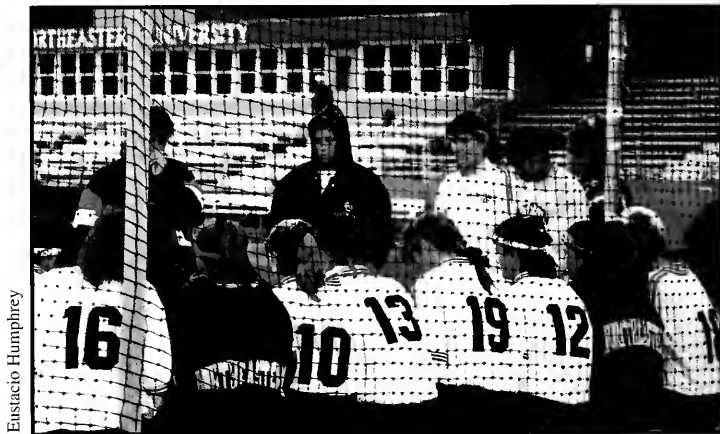

NU did have its moments, rallying to pull off a stunning upset of No. 3 Maryland. The leadership and scoring came from sophomore Denise Nasca, who blasted home 16 goals. Nasca struck for four goals in a 7-1 pasting of Vermont and registered a hat trick against Drexel late in the season.

Juniors Lisa Samson and Becky Willson came alive offensively late in season, finishing with a combined 16 goals and 24 assists, including a goal and two assists in NU's 3-0 semifinal tourney win over New Hampshire.

Freshman goalie Danielle Butsch played well in her rookie season, posting a 1.42 goals against average.

Butsch had solid defensive help from senior Wendy Obert, an Academic All-American at the back position.

The key to NU's winning season, however, came from the aggressive work of forwards Willson and Betsy Olson. While the Huskies had their struggles, 1993 was a resounding success considering NU had just three seniors.

BLINDSIDE

Football sacked by 2-9 mark

New coach, new system, same old form.

Under coach Barry Gallup, they set out to conquer, but by the end of the 1993 football season, they were right back where they started when we were freshmen - with a 2-9 record.

Despite making the big jump into the Yankee Conference, Northeastern's football team couldn't produce enough offense, enough protection for its quarterbacks, or enough of anything to finish near .500.

The dismal campaign was punctuated by a 53-6 loss to William & Mary and a 52-21 drubbing against James Madison, part of a stretch where NU lost eight straight on its way to the league cellar. Close defeats at the hands of Boston University (17-13), Richmond (24-21), and UMass (21-17) didn't help the cause. All in all, Northeastern provided strong defensive efforts in many games, only to have its offense sputter behind a weak line.

Quarterback Clarzell Pearl was magical in his first three starts, guiding the Huskies to a win over Villanova, while having a super passing game in a loss to Boise St. From there, however, he was chased out of the pocket too often and forced to make too many big plays while scrambling for his life.

NU's defense was strong in all but two games. Seniors Mark Salisbury, Miles McLean, and Silas Calhoun dominated opposing offenses with their rugged play. They helped force seven turnovers against UMass. Highly touted BU quarterback Robert Dougherty was virtually non-existent against the Husky defense until late in the fourth quarter.

The Huskies showed only flashes of brilliance on offense, aside from Pearl's early spark. Jeremy Gobeil broke a school record with his 16th career touchdown reception against Richmond, and underclassman Desmond Bellott added some outstanding catches.

For all that went wrong in 1993, however, the Huskies were far better off under Gallup's run-and-shoot offense than Paul Pawlak's ineffective wishbone. We may not have won, but at least some of the games provided a ray of hope.

Senior Steve Raethka took his soccer skills and applied them to the football field.

STRAIGHT SET SPIKE

Volleyball can't recover from early-season drought

Kimi Watterson, Northeastern's All-North Atlantic Conference team and All-New England Academic team winner, gets airborne for a spike.

A SEASON OF UPS AND DOWNS

Game 1 - NU defeats Loyola in straight sets, 15-10, 15-10, 15-4.

Games 2-8 - The Huskies lose every one of them, winning a total of seven sets.

Games 9-12 - NU rebounds with four wins, including five-set triumphs over Harvard and Dartmouth.

Games 13-15 - NU loses three straight, including a loss to Drexel at the NAC seeding tournament.

Game 28 - After winning three of four, NU gets crushed by DePaul, earning just seven points in a three-set romp.

This was not how it was supposed to end.

Back in 1990, Northeastern watched as a freshman recruit named Kimerle Watterson took to the court as a middle-hitter, dominating the front line with her 6-foot-1 frame. Husky volleyball gurus geared for her senior season, preparing for its best-ever finish.

But when the time came, most of her supporting cast and head coach were gone. All that remained from a conference championship team of her junior season were setter Kelly Morgan and a few inexperienced underclassmen.

Despite the Watterson-Morgan combination, the Huskies could only put together a 12-17 record, losing seven of their first eight games. The North Atlantic Conference tournament didn't provide much solace for the Huskies, who entered as the No. 8 seed and exited with a second-round loss.

Watterson was terrific in her four years at NU, carting home a NAC title and helping her team become one of the strongest in the Northeast, with 16 wins in 1992. She finished the 1993 regular season with a team-leading 369 kills and 93 blocks.

But our senior year started out with a disastrous road trip and despite her efforts, NU never recovered.

After opening the season with a very strong 3-0 win over Loyola-Chicago, NU managed to win only four sets in its next seven games, getting smoked at the Hofstra Invitational. In all, NU lost seven of its first eight and finished on the down side of nine shutouts.

The good news for the Huskies was the inspired play of hitters Heather Rowcliffe, Michelle Palian and Judy Lee, helping NU go 11-9 to finish the season after the rocky start.

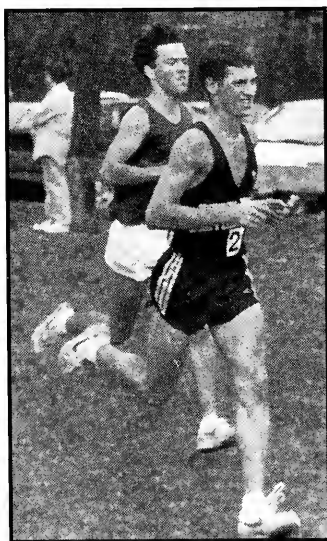

SECOND WIND

After slow start, men take second at NAC's

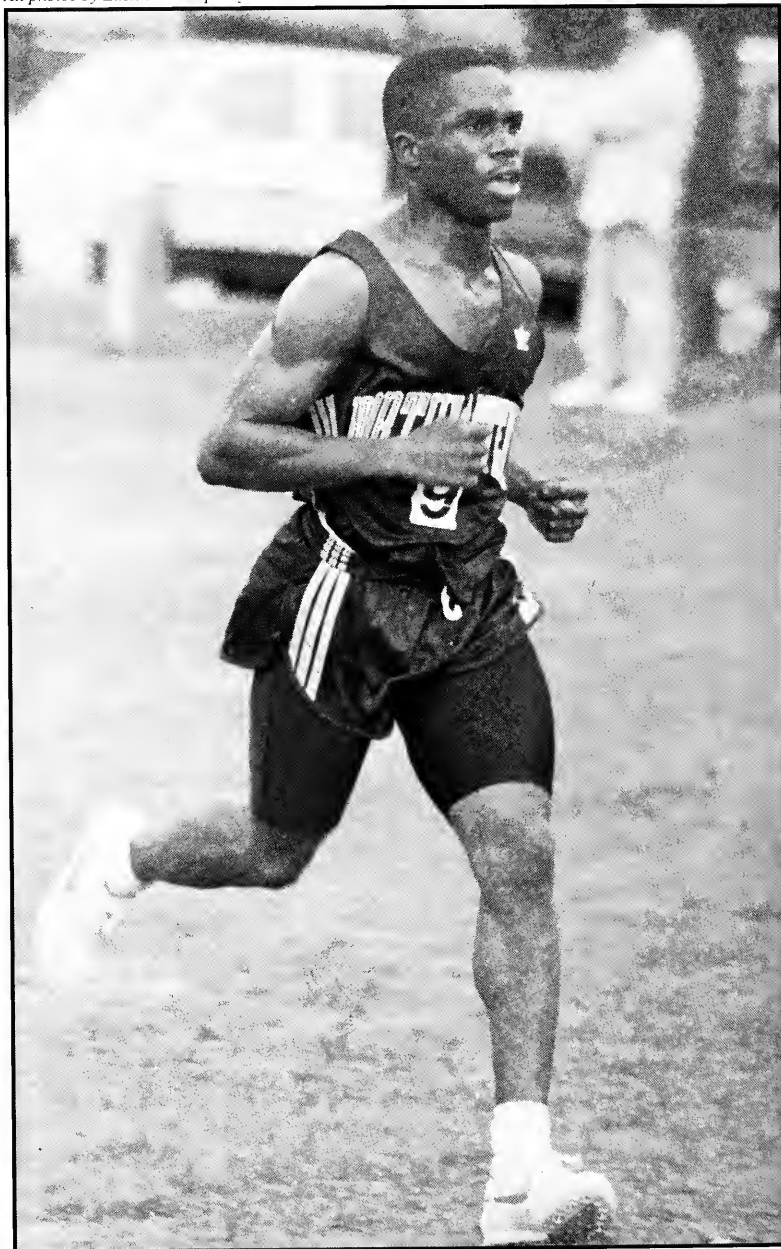

A soft, rubbery track. If only cross-country courses were lines with a bouncy surface, NU's men's cross-country team might have honed in on a New England title. Instead, it had to settle for a very strong finish on the paved roads of a difficult 1993 schedule.

As always, Erik Nedeau headed the Huskies contingent with top 10 finishes in every meet. Nedeau, a 1992 finalist for the Olympic Trials in track, could not catch the top cross-country runners locally in the regular season, but stunned everyone by making the NCAA's by improving on his career best by 45 seconds, helping NU gain a permanent spot on the New England Top 10 Poll.

As a team, the Huskies rebounded from some poor early-season showings to place second at the North Atlantic Conference championships. Both Nedeau and Jayme Fishman were rewarded with invitations to the IC4A championships.

They raced through Franklin Park, not knowing where they would finish, but Huskies runners had to figure they wouldn't place very high as a team at the North Atlantic Conference Championships.

Throughout the 1993 season, NU barely managed to place at meets, sometimes finishing dead last as a team and sometimes as low as 12th out of a possible 15 teams. The NAC's however provided quite a new twist.

On the heels of Tonia Kemps' Top 20 finish, Northeastern surprised its conference foes by running sixth at the Championships. Although distant from a conference crown or even a Top 10 individual performance, Husky runners put a very long season behind them with the placing.

MIRACLE ON ICE

A year after crashing to the league cellar, NU clawed into Top 10

It was early in 1993, and NU hockey fans were booing. There were no signs of joy or hope in Matthews for this squad. As freshmen we were blessed with a good hockey team. But we watched its demise, a long, arduous process filled with losses and very few wins.

But something happened late in 1993. Coach Ben Smith shaped his first real recruiting class into freshmen stars. More importantly, he had several dissenters leave to graduation and watched as the rest of the bunch picked up the pieces of that broken squad. Team hockey was back, and so were the wins. So were the fans.

In one of the most amazing comeback stories in the history of the Black and Red, NU went from 24 losses in 1992-93 to 19 wins in 1993-94. It finished its season in the NCAA tournament for only the third time in history. It opened the year with seven straight victories and lingered in the nation's top 10 for two months. The wins prompted the opening of the balcony at The Arena for the first time since 1989 and saw the most fans witness a sporting event in over 10 years, some 4,000 strong against Maine.

Huskies faithful had a lot to roar about. Jean-Francois Aube led the league in goal-scoring with 27 tallies and the defense was rock solid thanks to the finesse of Francois Bouchard and the crunching checks of Dan McGillis.

And then there was goalie Todd Reynolds, who epitomized the team's comeback with a comeback of his own. Reynolds fought off constant back pains and a year on the sideline, returning to stonewall the opposition. He beat four nationally ranked teams with his spectacular play and finished with a 3.6 goals against average.

Despite a disappointing Beanpot, Northeastern reached back to sweep Providence at Matthews in the first round of the Hockey East playoffs and earned a tie against New Hampshire in the consolation, good enough for a tournament bid.

Forward Mike Tarr, who was second in the league in assists with 34, and defensemen Francois Bouchard were honored by Hockey East with league first-team selections. Aube carted home a second-team honor.

Dan McGillis was just the kind of defenseman NU needed to spark its rebound, one who kept his own end clear and kept players like Joe Hulbig far away from the Huskies crease.

ON THE DEFENSIVE

Allowing goals had always been a problem for the Huskies. In 1993-94, our end was a lot safer to patrol, thanks in part to Darryl MacNair and Francois Bouchard (left). The Huskies allowed over five goals a game in 1992-93. In our senior year, they cut it down to just over four per contest.

THE TOURNEY TRAIL

Reaching the NCAA Tournament was no small feat for the Huskies. After putting together the program's worst records in back-to-back seasons, NU did a complete 180.

The Huskies lost to eventual NCAA champion Lake Superior St. in overtime in the tournament and actually won the game in regulation, but officials ruled that an NU shot hadn't crossed the goal line with three minutes left when it had. Lake Superior went on to smoke BU in the final, 9-1.

Ben Smith's club opened the season with four straight wins, including a stunning 5-4 upset of No. 1 Boston University. The Huskies downed nationally-ranked Western Michigan to capture the Syracuse Invitational Tournament. They also swept a pair of games at Maine for the first time in more than 20 years.

Despite a disappointing Beanpot, NU roared back to take two from Providence in the final round of the Hockey East tournament before bowing to BU. NU secured its berth with a 4-4 tie against New Hampshire to end the season.

Winger Jason Melong's speed forced defensemen like BC's Michael Spalla to play catch up and kept the Huskies on the offensive.

MEN'S HOCKEY

With Todd Reynolds holding the fort, the Huskies had little to worry about in front of the crease.

The last time Northeastern had won a Beanpot tournament was 1988, and goalie Todd Reynolds knew it. He didn't need any reminders. He had been there in 1992 and 1993 and watched his team go down in flames in the first round.

But 1994 would be different. Reynolds was planning on being the difference. He had come a long way from Campbellville, Ontario to find the tradition of this tournament and he was not going to let it pass him by.

Despite allowing a goal in the first period, Reynolds was showing his brilliance against a fired-up Boston College squad. He made save after save, keeping NU in the game. Then, as NU was clearing the puck from its zone, Reynolds collapsed to the ice and hunched over. While play was going on in the B.C. end, no one noticed. Referees then saw the wounded goalie and skated fast to assist him. It was eerie. No one had touched him. No one had bumped into him or came near the crease. He just fell down.

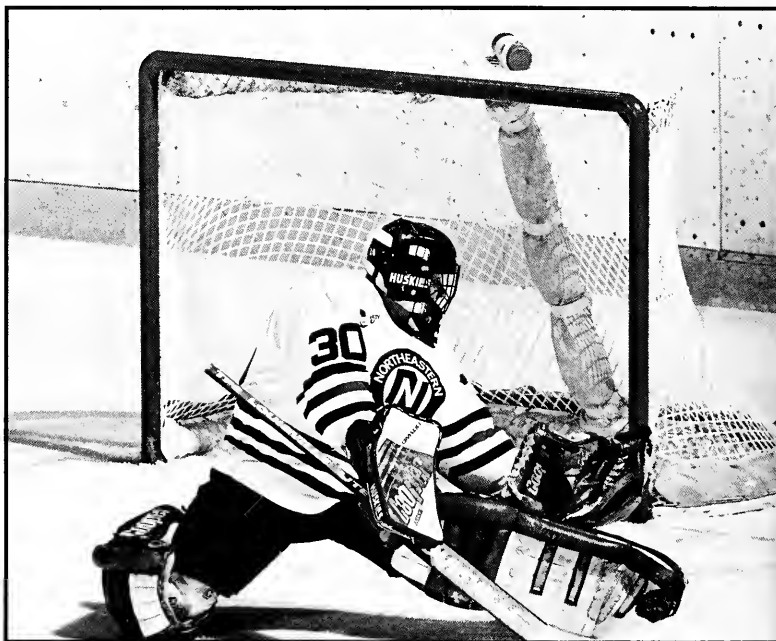

"I think it's his back," a fan yelled from the Section 103 of the balcony. Hands soon became pressed over mouths. This was the worst thing that could have happened. The Beanpot no longer mattered. Todd Reynolds, our saving grace all year, was down.

Helped off the ice, Reynolds made his way to the dressing room. It was his back all right, which normally means, for a goaltender, the season's over, especially in Reynolds' case.

The year before, the back problems started for Reynolds, and he had to sit out for most of the season while it healed. He underwent therapy in Canada five days a week, four hours a day to get his back in order. He avoided surgery, but the pain was excruciating. Once considered the second best freshman goalie in the nation, Reynolds was vulnerable, maybe moreso than those who can't cut down angles well or have a slow glove.

The Beanpot was supposed to be his stage, like all other NU goalies in the past. But it was a nightmare. Reynolds left and it appeared he was gone for the season.

At the time, no team in Hockey East was hotter than Northeastern, except maybe B.C. Boston College went on to win 5-4 in double-overtime that night. The following Monday, NU was pasted, 8-0 by B.U. Lost was the top-10 ranking and the No. 2 spot in the Hockey East standings. Like all of the previous four seasons, it appeared NU was quickly heading for the cellar after its hot start.

Then Reynolds came back. He practiced through the pain. He stood in the back of his classes because he couldn't sit in a chair - it hurt his back too much. He would lie on the floor of his apartment so he wouldn't feel the pain. But the only therapy that seemed to helped was getting back on the ice.

And while the NU forwards showed their flash, and the defense was delivering checks, Todd Reynolds was stealing the spotlight along with everyone's heart. In his final four regular-season games, Reynolds allowed just eight goals. He was even more impressive in the playoffs.

Night one - NU beats Providence, 4-3, barely holding on after coasting to a 4-1 lead. Reynolds made 25 saves, stopping a pair of breakaways and robbing Chad Quenneville on a wrist shot with less than a minute left.

Night two - NU beats Providence, 2-1, in overtime. Star of the game? Not Tomas Persson, who scored the game-winner. Not Darryl MacNair, who broke up a would be game-winner. No. It was Reynolds, who kept NU close and turned aside several point-blank chances, allowing the Huskies to come back from a 1-0 deficit.

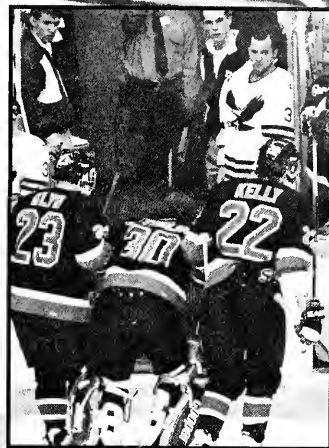

The Beanpot memories? They were gone. Todd Reynolds had given NU its first tournament series win on home ice. The players mobbed Persson at the other end of the ice, Reynolds included. They all skated off, playing to the crowd and thanking them for believing.

All were gone except for Reynolds. He had circled toward the bench and looked up to the crowd as he was skating off. A standing ovation welcomed him and all he could do was smile - a very big smile.

Twice before, Reynolds had been taken from the game he loved. But that wasn't going to stop him. At the beginning of the year, I asked him how his back was holding up. He said, "It still kills me." I asked if he was going to be able to play every night with the tough schedule of Hockey East games (they often play back-to-back nights). He said, "I don't think so. But Mike (Veisor) is a real good goalie. We'll probably split time."

By season's end, it was all Reynolds. In the playoffs it was all Reynolds. He played back-to-back nights against Providence and was spectacular. No signs of back problems... at least he never showed us any.

Women's hockey relished another regular-season title

Though the finish will forever haunt the members of the 1993-94 women's hockey team, they had nothing to be disappointed about.

Despite losing its No. 1 national ranking on the final day of the year in a 5-2 defeat to Providence, the Huskies once again proved they were the best collegiate team in women's hockey. They held onto the No. 1 slot from day one of the season, beating and tying Providence, before having the title ripped away by the Friars in a tiring ECAC tournament.

The Huskies reached the final by knocking off powerhouse Brown. The Friars, at home in Providence, edged New Hampshire. It was an atypical ending on a schedule dominated by NU, which finished 19-6-3.

Bolstered by forwards Rayanne Conway, Kim Haman, Shelley Looney and Jeannie Sobek, NU outgunned everyone en route to a perfect record in the ECAC in the regular season. Along the way, NU captured its 11th Beanpot championship and first in three years.

The trio of Haman, Looney and Sobek each scored more than 20 goals and Conway added a team-leading 23 assists. Those four accounted for more than 70 percent of the Huskies goals. The offense surged, but defensively, NU was equally as strong.

Captain Marion Corcoran made it her duty to keep the opposition far away from the Huskies crease. She managed just four assists, but her help on the blue line supported a cast that allowed just 2.45 goals per game.

And when Corcoran was knocking bodies out of the slot, Michelle DiStefano and Kim Flatt were stonewalling opposing scorers. The goaltending tandem shined, each posting goals against averages under three. DiStefano registered 13 wins and three ties against three losses.

THE POT IS OURS

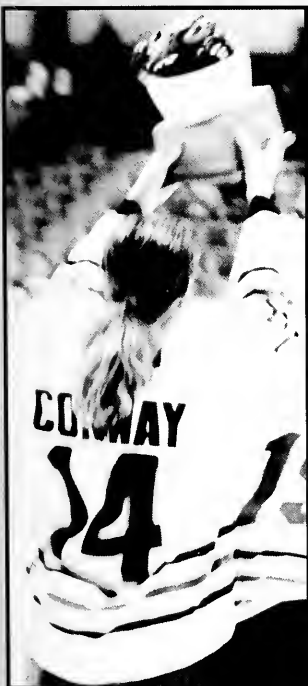

The Northeastern women's hockey team was not only the No. 1 team in the nation for almost all of our five-years, it also claimed Boston's top hockey prize, the Beanpot, in eight of the last nine seasons. The 1994 win, celebrated by Rayanne Conway (left), marked its first triumph in two seasons.

SCORING TOUCH

When Vicki Sunohara left after our sophomore year, she took with her scoring records that may never be equalled at NU, including one memorable 52-goal season. Leaving early meant depleted forces up front. In 1994, however, the scoring came back in bunches. Take a look:

- Kim Haman, Rayanne Conway and Shelley Looney all eclipsed the 20-goal mark.

- As a team, NU averaged 4.5 goals per game, while allowing just 2.4

TAKING A TUMBLE

Individuals soar, but injuries send team stumbling to 6-12 record

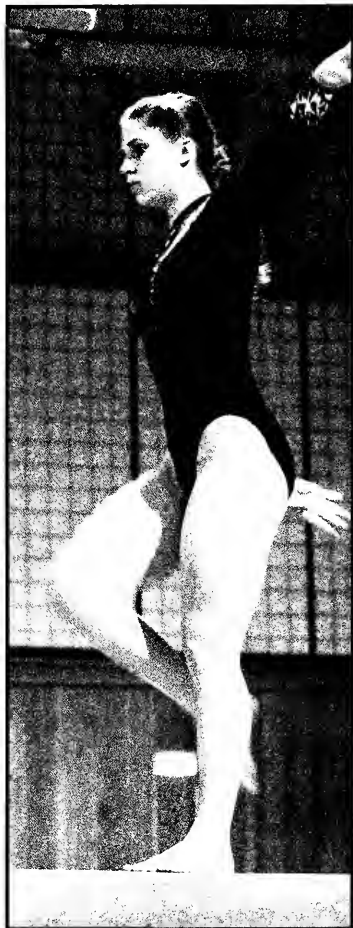

The season could be summed up in one meet, Northeastern's final meet of the season. At the National Invitational Tournament at Southwest Missouri State, the Huskies placed 7th out of 8 teams. And the 8th team forfeited.

NU's season was not very promising from a team perspective. The Huskies faced too many injuries.

But there was hope, particularly in the performances of Sandra Avellani and underclassmen Robin Beeley, Katie Sivak and Christa Hart who shined on the floor and bars.

TWENTY SOMETHING

Losses pile up as injuries to Callahan, Harlee make '94 ugly

Gerald Brown

Spectacular drives to the hoop were few and far between, but not for Anthony Brown who lifted NU with his consistent scoring touch.

DOUBLE THE TROUBLE

Injuries to Dan Callahan, the nation's fifth leading rebounder, and Ben Harlee (right) left the Huskies with little potency. Here's what each did the previous season and why NU lost without them:

Harlee - 12.4 points. 4.7 assists
Callahan - 10 pts., 12 rebounds

There was a time not too long ago when Northeastern's basketball team was feared and revered. Once upon a time, the Huskies were ranked 15th in the nation. That was 1987 and it must have seemed light years away for the 1994 basketball team.

Traditionally, Northeastern was the North Atlantic Conference leader. In 1993, it finished one game behind champion Delaware. A year later, courtesy of injuries, it lost 22 of 27 games. Without the injured Ben Harlee and Dan Callahan, NU was a little bit short of mediocre.

The fact was, Northeastern lost a bunch of close games. But many of those close losses were due to another's woes. The Huskies had their bright spots, mainly the play of guard Anthony Brown, but not enough to make a difference.

The 5-22 mark was the worst in the history of the program. While every other winter team was flourishing, this team was floundering. Poor shooting and a lack of rebounding hurt badly.

It was not, however, a season without effort. The Huskies could never be criticized for lack of hustle or heart. They just didn't have the horses.

But there was criticism. A program with the tradition of NU's basketball team was bound to hear it, especially considering how well the men's hockey team and women's basketball team had rebounded. Much of the blame was laid at the feet of coach Karl Fogel, rightly or wrongly.

Fogel could not save the disaster laid at his fingertips. Huskies players like Brown did all they could. He averaged over 20 points per game. Deo Djossou and Al Barney added solid play inside, but losing Harlee (the top scorer) and Callahan (the nation's fifth leading rebounder in 1993) were too much to replace.

Once the season had ended, Fogel, who had recruited Reggie Lewis and first spotted him, was given his release by the athletic department and given a new job at the university. For Fogel it was a difficult way to end his coaching career at NU. Before 1993, he had compiled 126 wins in just seven seasons, including two NAC titles and a pair of NCAA tournament berths in 1987 and 1991.

SHOW STOPPERS

Women take another giant step toward NCAA's

*T*wo points. A measly basket or a pair of free throws. That's how close the Huskies were from making the NCAA tournament. But there was little disappointment the day NU lost to Vermont, 53-51.

As recently as 1989, the Huskies lost 26 games and won just three. So when they walked off the court without a berth in the big dance, but with an 18-9 record, there was no shame. Reflection provided a view of the most fantastic turnaround of a program in our five years in Huskyville.

The women's hoop team started 0-3 and were just 6-6 after 12 games before turning on the jets. Behind Katasha Artis, the squad won 12 of its final 14 games prior to falling to Vermont.

Artis wowed the NAC by averaging 20.6 points (the best average in school history) and 10 rebounds per game as a junior. With Carrine Jones, Nora Mitchell and Felicia Hobson all adding strong floor play, the Huskies had a very potent contingent.

Near season's end, they won five straight games, including a stunning 74-66 upset of UVM behind Jones' 24 points. The plan was simple - get ahead early and don't let up. The Huskies were 13-0 when leading at halftime and 2-0 when tied at the half.

Aside from UVM's Sherri Turnbull, Artis was clearly the best player in the conference. She scored a season-high 30 points against Drexel and added six more games in which she tallied 25 or more points. She also pulled down 19 rebounds against Delaware, one short of a school record.

The 18-9 mark was NU's best in 10 seasons. That's quite an accomplishment considering NU won a combined 18 games in our first three years here.

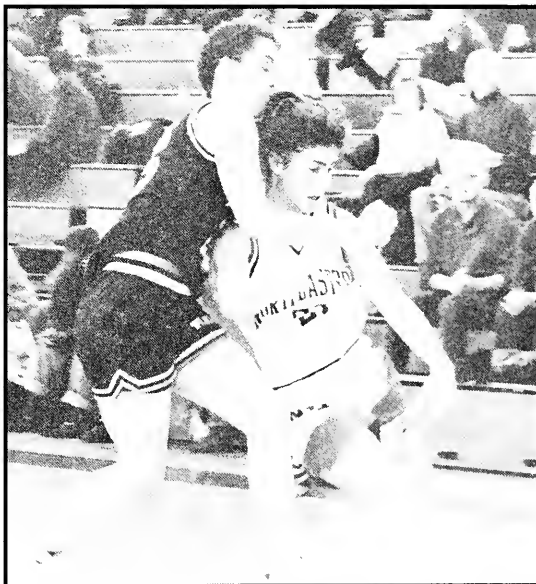

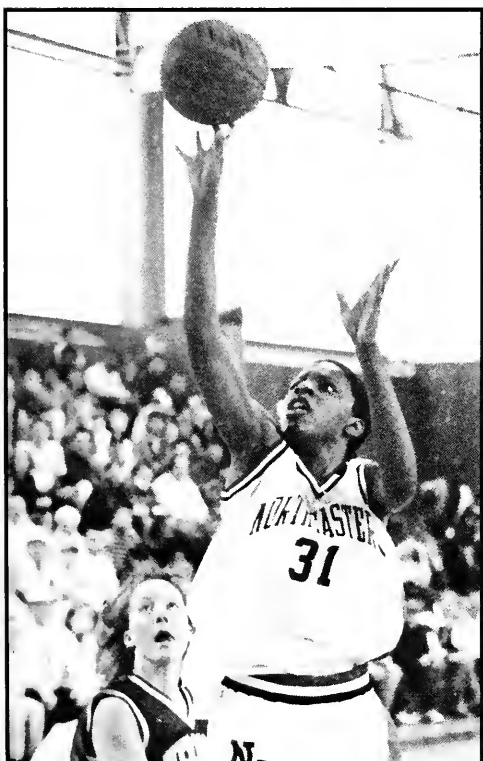

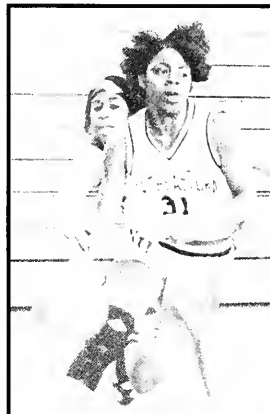

Nora Mitchell stepped up her play, and her willingness to make drives to the basket helped give NU a very strong starting five.

AN ARTIS-TIC IMPRESSION

The University of Virginia did not recognize her talents, so Katasha Artis left school. It took just one dribble on the Cabot Gym floor before Artis knew she'd found a home and NU realized it had welcomed the best player in its history.

By DAVE PIERCE

An athlete lives in a world where one turn of a blown out ankle or one blown out knee has the capability of changing the direction of his or her life. And there is a sense of urgency that makes every moment athletes play in the prime of their careers something very magical.

In her two years at NU, Katasha Artis cast spells on the world of women's basketball and Northeastern while working her way through setbacks most 20-years olds couldn't fathom.

On Jan. 4, 1991, Artis reinjured a knee that she had hurt twice before, in the preseason and in a high-school all-star game. She was a big-time recruit at the University of Virginia, a women's hoop program of national prominence.

After rehab, Artis decided not to return to the perennial powerhouse where she would play a small role in the big machine-like program. She turned to best friend and former high school foe, Carrine Jones, and made the decision to come to Huntington Avenue and play in an atmosphere where she could not only grow as a ballplayer, but as a person.

Her decision helped NU become a women's basketball program worthy of respect. It has also placed Artis in a position to see her goals, having a career in law and playing ball professionally in Europe, become realities.

"[Northeastern] is not like Virginia]" Artis, a junior and criminal justice major from Brooklyn, said. "Coming here has helped my game. There I would have played a small role in a program, where here it's important for me to work on my all-around game."

Artis came a long way from being a teenager that played pick-up basketball with Brooklyn greats like Dallas Mavericks franchise star Jamal Mashburn and former Syracuse standout Conrad McRae. By her junior year, she attained 900 points and 500 rebounds faster than Reggie Lewis and any other Husky hoopster in history.

When NU coach Joy Malchodi was asked if Artis was the best she'd ever coached, she said, "In terms of both her offensive and defensive play ... yes. Pam Green (1982-86) was a great scorer and learned to be a defensive player. Carla Singleton (1983-87) was talented but not a leaper like Katasha, nonetheless she was probably the best defensive player we ever had here. Athletically speaking, and the fact that she can play offensively and defensively, Katasha is the most exceptional."

The Huskies turned around their program since Artis arrived via transfer. NU posted a 9-19 record before Artis started her NU career. NU finished at 14-14 in her first season, and she walked away with Rookie of the Year honors in the NAC. In our senior year, the Huskies finished 18-9 and suffered a heart-breaking two-point loss to Vermont in the league championship game.

"I think she's important because she can bring up the level of play of the people around her," Malchodi said. "It's nice having her because last year we came in with our sights on the conference championship. The players can see what they have with Katasha. Because of her we were focused on winning a championship."

Boston College head coach Cathy Inglesse, who led Vermont to two straight NAC titles and NCAA appearances in 1992 and 1993, was very impressed with Artis' talent and smooth play.

"I remember watching her in the NAC semifinals two years ago," Inglesse said. "I was like 'Oh my god, I don't want to play her in the championship. I'd rather play Maine.'"

"She has a sense like the men where she reads the defense and reacts. She doesn't always go to one side. She does what is right for the situation. She is definitely one of the best players in New England."

And definitely the best we'd seen at Northeastern.

Coates' first season at the helm was a very positive one thanks to strong relay teams, consistent performances from top swimmer Jenn LaMontagne, and the heroics of diver Jane de Lima.

The Huskies finished second at the NAC Championships to BU and placed a surprise sixth at the ECAC Conference Meet, garnering 242.5 points in the 27-team field.

BACK ON TRACK

Diamond stars slug their way back to the NCAA's

The Northeastern baseball team went to Florida in early 1994 looking for an elixir to heal the wounds of the previous year, when they went 17-19. Spring training offered little solace.

The Huskies started just 2-5 in the Sunshine State before heading back North. They were beaten by Southern Maine, 8-1, and were battered by Florida International, 7-1. All signs pointed toward another disappointing spring for Neil McPhee's club.

But NU reached back, dug deep, and rode the arms of its solid pitching staff to win 21 of its next 23 games. The Huskies then went on to win the Beanpot, the NAC tournament and found themselves in the NCAA tournament for the first time since 1973.

NU ended its run with a pair of losses in the tourney to Tennessee and North Carolina St., but not before chalking up 35 wins, the most since the 1991 campaign.

NAC Player of the Year Derek Gauthier paced the charge, leading the team in hitting (.326), homeruns (15) and runs batted in (54). Bill Barrale added a .320 average and Mark Hopkins hit .311 while stealing 27 bases in 27 attempts.

But pitching was the cornerstone of this upstart bunch. John Forneiro went 7-1 with a 2.20 earned run average. Peter Schultz registered 10 wins, including the first three of the season when the Huskies were struggling. And Chris Ennico notched a 5-1 record, while allowing opponents to hit just .210 against him.

The mark of this squad was coming through in the clutch. NU was 17-5 in extra-inning games, 7-3 in one-run games, and 17-0 in games which they led after six innings.

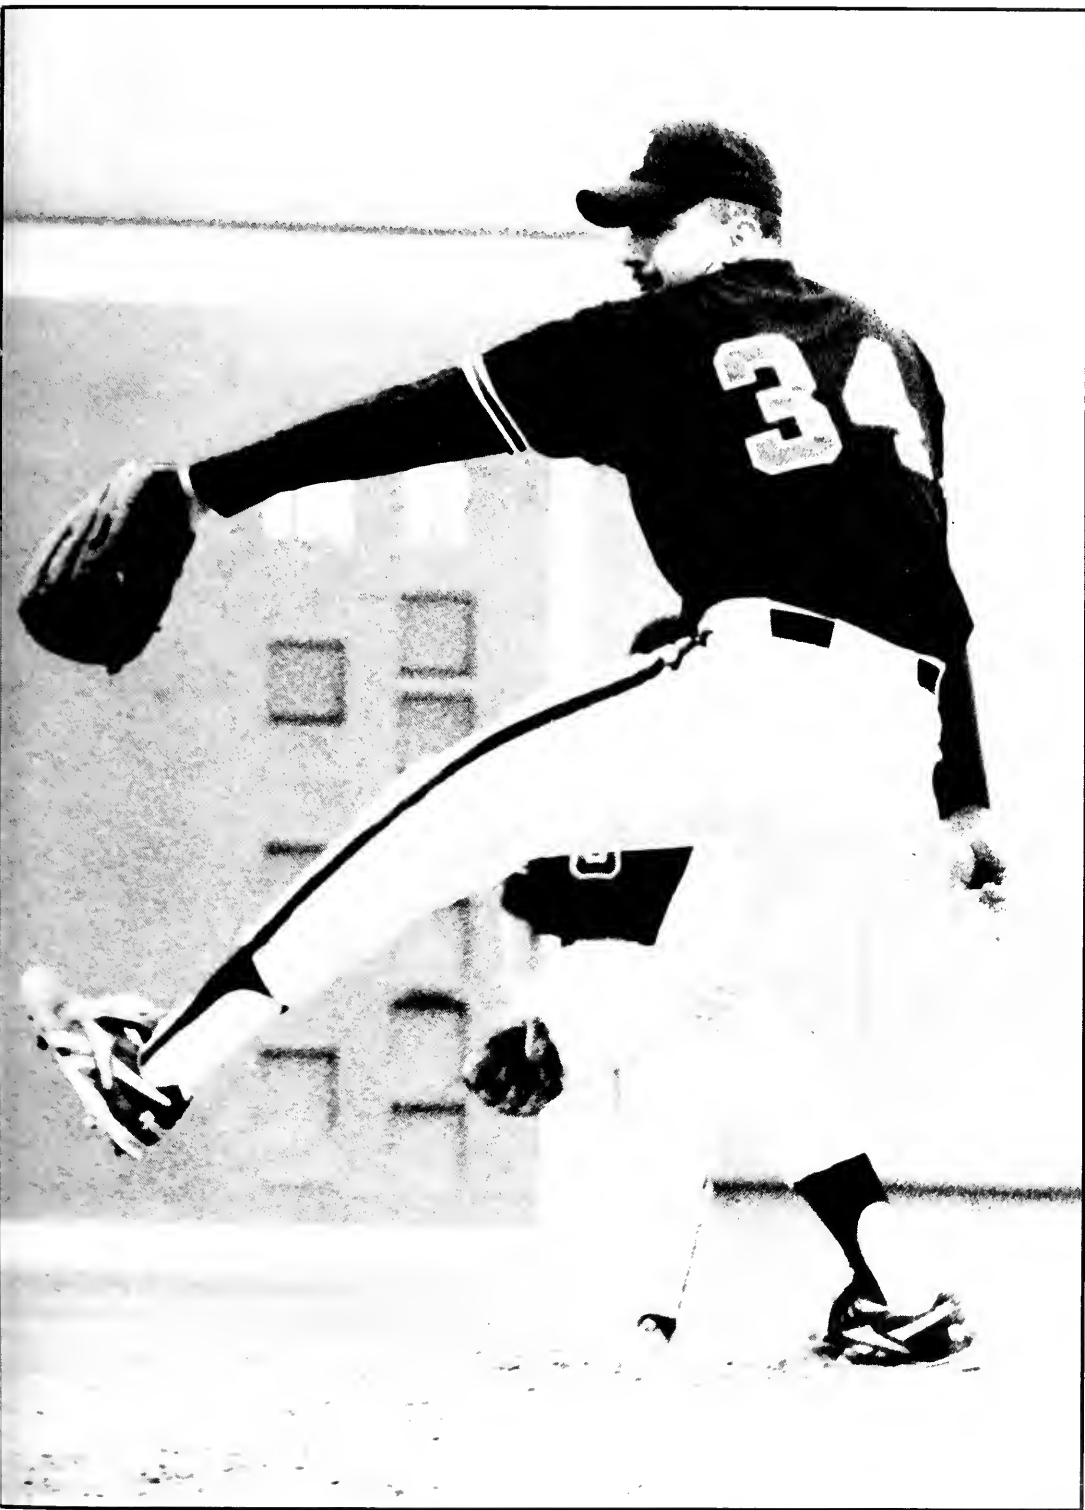

Bill Barrale, the team's second-leading hitter, takes a mighty swing against Drexel.

Going into the postseason, NU knew it had to win the North Atlantic tournament to get to the NCAA's. When Peter Schultz (left) was upset in the second round by Hartford, the chances looked bleak. The Huskies stayed alive, beating Delaware by a run and then bounced Hartford, with a 6-5 win in the first game and a 5-0 shutout in the final. Freshman Jay O'Shaughnessy struck out 18 in the final to send NU to Knoxville.

Varsity can't catch up with top boats in trying season

*A*nchored.

Once upon a time, coach Buzz Congram had one of the most powerful crews in the nation. In fact, his team was one one-hundredth of a second from knocking off Penn in 1990 and becoming national champions. By 1994, NU was nowhere near the top of the charts.

Drifting without many of the top rowers of its past, Northeastern won just one meet, ironically defeating Penn for the Burke Cup. It placed 10th at the Intercollegiate Rowing Association Regatta, lost to Harvard by almost three seconds and was beaten by BU in the season opener.

The only real positive coming out of the season other than the Burke was the display put on by NU's freshman boat, which finished second only to Brown by .5 seconds at the IRA's. The freshmen stunned Harvard and Penn and crushed BU by 14 seconds. With a promise toward the future, the NU crew drifts on searching for that elusive national title.

And Huskies rowers Regan Briggs, Kara Mulvey and Sanja Obsivac didn't disappoint, bringing home three dual-meet triumphs and a fifth-place finish at the Intercollegiate Rowing Association's Regatta..

Strong efforts lifted NU to a 5-3 record before the Eastern Sprints, where the varsity placed ninth. Rutgers, New Hampshire, Boston College and Columbia were all victims of the upstart Red & Black.

After capturing the conference title indoors, the Huskies moved outside and had to settle for a fourth-place finish in the NAC.

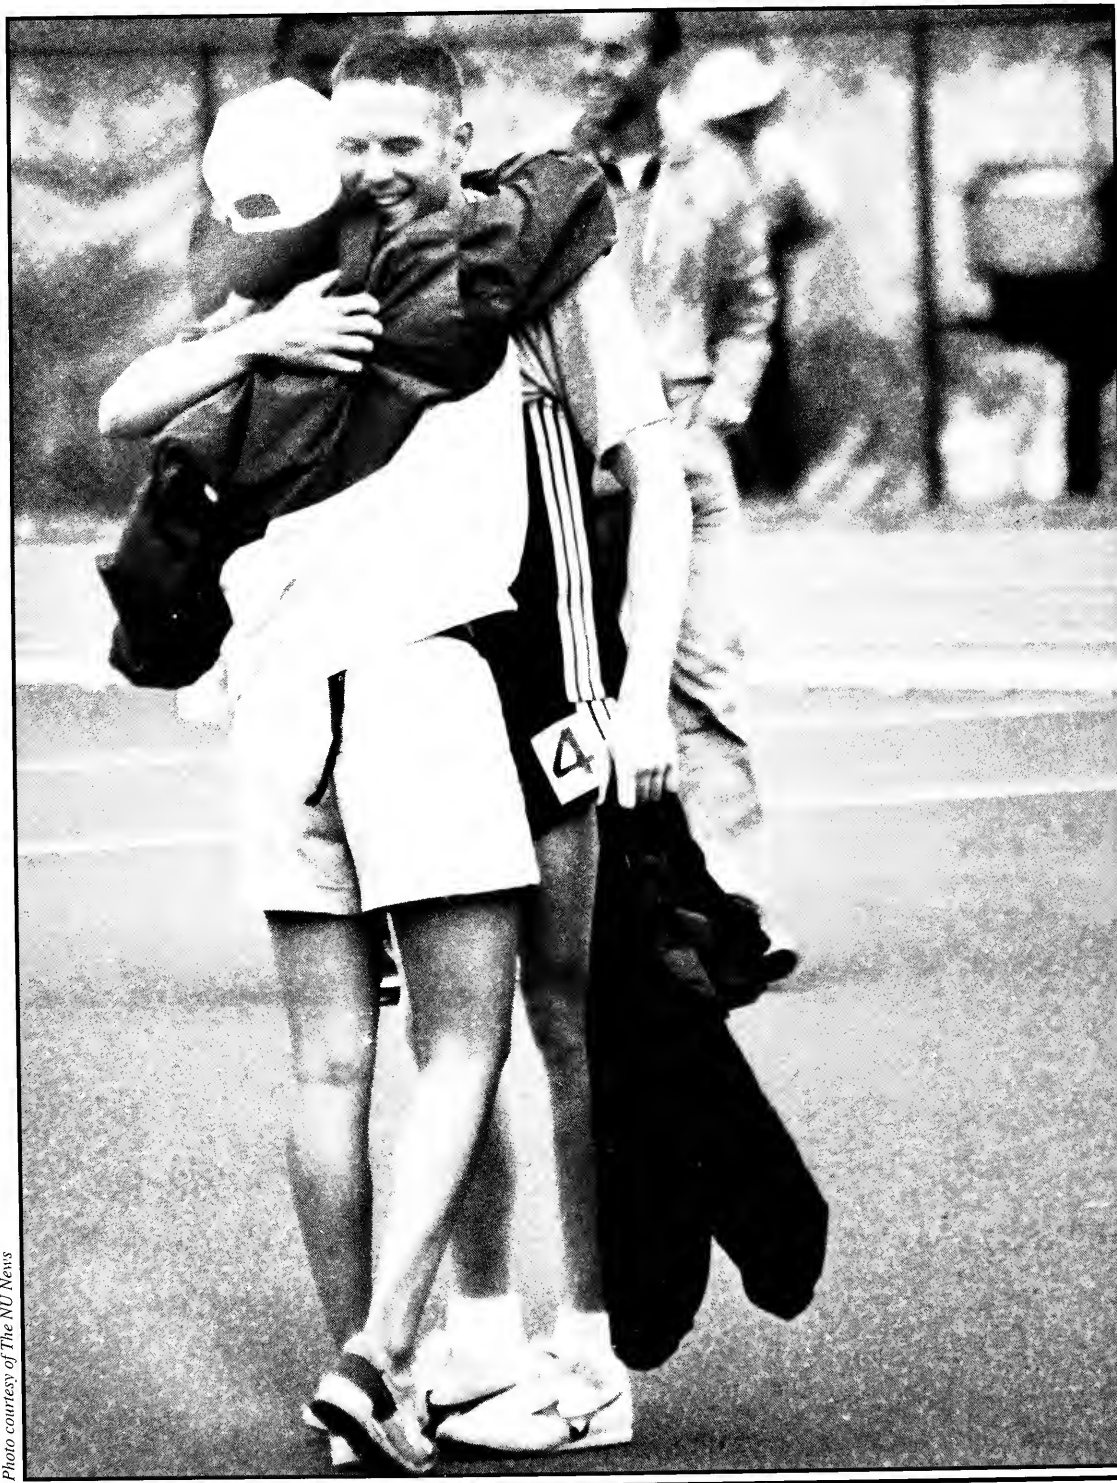

But NU did not let the disappointing placing get them down. The tracksters rebounded for a very impressive fifth-place posting at the New England Championships.

THE TRAIL BLAZER

Erik Nedeau brought swiftness, style, and wins to Northeastern's track program. In the process, he made himself an All-American and a finalist at the 1992 Olympic trials

He was as close to a sports hero as we had in our five years at NU. Steve Carney was a damn good basketball player. Rob Cowie was one of the best hockey defensemen to skate at Matthews. And quarterback Ralph Barone bordered on amazing at times.

But none of the above could outduel or overshadow the heroics of one of the nation's top runners, Erik Nedeau.

He did not have a local track to compete on. Nedeau had to travel to Dedham to practice with his team on a real track. Running through Boston and dodging traffic and pedestrians, however, proved to be quite ideal for this superstar.

By the end of his senior year, Nedeau was one of the best runners in the country in a pair of events - the 1,500 and the 800. He qualified for the NCAA championships in the 800 with the second fastest time in the country. But he didn't compete.

Instead, Nedeau opted to go for the 1,500 at the NCAA's with strong approval from NU coach Mark Lech. And to the surprise of everyone, including a nationally televised audience and CBS commentators, the Huskies' top gun placed second, and first among American competitors.

"Obviously, I wanted to win, but if I didn't, I wanted to make sure that whoever did win had to run their best," Nedeau told The Northeastern News.

Arkansas' Graham Hood, a Canadian Olympian in 1992, won the event, but was continually pushed by Nedeau. Nedeau made a strong burst in the final 10 meters, but couldn't catch Hood, who finished 34 hundredths a second ahead. But placing second meant that he had edged another Olympian and two other former collegiate champions. The quest for perfection didn't stop there.

"I believe that if I stay healthy, I should be able to make the Olympics not only in '96, but also in 2000," Nedeau told The News.

The 1996 Olympics in Atlanta were well within reach. Nedeau had been close to the summit before, back in 1992, when his speedy times in the 800 qualified him for the Olympic trials. Nedeau finished ninth.

But the 1,500 is Nedeau's type of race.

"It was always my goal to run in the 1,500. All of my training is for the 1,500," Nedeau told The News.

But Northeastern is quite a long way from reaching that pinnacle. The obscurity of the school and its program make it difficult for anyone with Nedeau's talent level to hit the Olympics. So the idea, at least as we neared graduation, was to latch on to an organization and find a sponsor.

"I think that if he can get on a professional club, one that will be able to provide competition for him, then he has an excellent chance of being one of the top three runners in the country," Lech said to The News.

But even if the plans fall through, Nedeau has quite another talent to fall back on - academics. A continual Dean's List student, the criminal justice major was named male student-athlete of the year in 1994.

But as we left, his eyes were focused on racing in the Olympics. 'God' was ready. That's what they called him. God. Pretty high praise for a pretty darn good runner.

MEDALIST HONORS

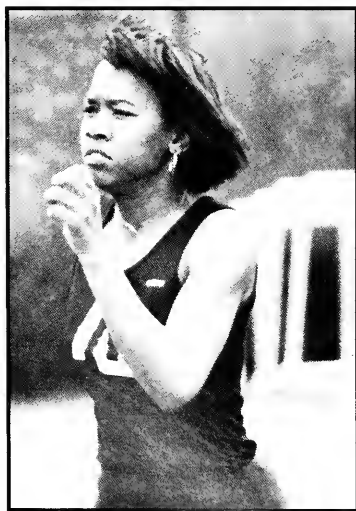

Women take gold in the NAC and silver in New England

The title dash had been building for several years. Each season, the Huskies kept the title fires inside them kindling. This time, there was no BU standing in the way blocking a league crown and just one team setting up shop ahead of them in New England.

In 1994, behind powerful field stars Stephanie Pavao, Lisa Markland and Theresa Findlay, NU captured the North Atlantic title and finished just 14 points behind UConn in New England.

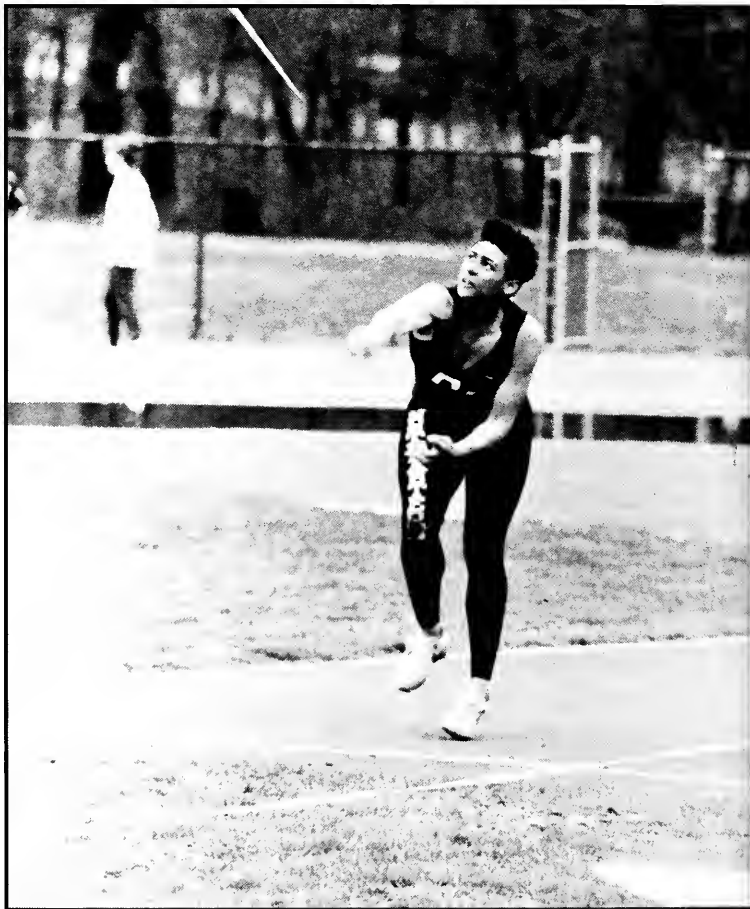

As another season was put in the books, coach Sherman Hart had a chance to look back on something that is not too far away for a talented and young squad - a New England title and a place among the nation's elite.

Findlay was unstoppable in the shotput and Pavao was equally as strong in the long jump and triple jump. Pavao set school records in both events, with a 19-foot, 11-inch effort in the long jump and a 41-3 mark in the triple jump.

Senior Tanisha McGriff powered the Huskies' running contingent with strong finishes in the 4x400 relay.

Tribute

Tom Herde/Boston Globe

He was the greatest athlete to ever put on a Northeastern uniform. More than his dominance on the basketball court, though, Reggie Lewis was a superstar off the floor. His warm smile, his loving personality and his contributions to the community made him NU's premier spokesperson. In 1993, while working out, the Celtics captain collapsed and died at Brandeis University. The tragedy gripped the nation and devastated NU students and faculty, who had followed him and rejoiced with him on his path to greatness. The loss will always be remembered by us. In his honor, we offer this lasting tribute, a memory of the wonderful legacy he left behind. We will never forget you No. 35. You're in our hearts forever.

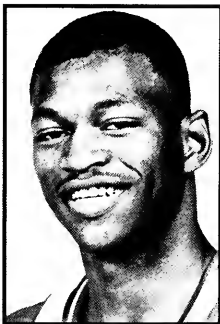

Michele McDonald/Boston Globe

1965-1982

Born and raised in Baltimore, Maryland, Reggie began his career on the courts near the housing project he lived in. At Dunbar High School, he was a star, but a star that was hidden on a great team that included future NBA players Reggie Williams, David Wingate and Muggsy Bogues. Reggie was the sixth man on that squad, and often unheralded until NU coaches Karl Fogel and Jim Calhoun noticed him.

1983-1986

Reggie's prowess at Northeastern over this four-year stretch was unbelievable. He shattered almost every school record, including career scoring average (22.2), most points in a game (41) and most points in a season (748) while carrying the Huskies to a No. 15 national ranking and four straight tournament berths. The Huskies also carted home four straight NAC titles during this span, courtesy of Reggie.

1987-1991

Drafted in the first round by the Celtics in 1987, Reggie's NBA career started slow before he began to emerge as one of the premier players in the game. His scoring average increased every year and by 1991 he had become an All-Star, averaging over 20 points per game. He also earned the national spotlight, starring in his own Reebok commercial. Always an offensive threat, Reggie proved a solid defensive foe, too. Many times he was asked to guard NBA superstars like Michael Jordan. By 1991, he had reached the pinnacle of the NBA. After the season, he was named Celtics captain

1992-1993

In 1992-93, Lewis' struggles started. Being the only true threat on a team filled with a few aging stars and mediocre subs meant he was guarded more closely. He still averaged over 20 points per game. During the 1993 playoffs, however, against Charlotte, he collapsed to the floor on a fast break. He got up holding his chest. Doctors soon diagnosed him with a heart ailment. They said if he wanted to play again, he would have to have a defibrillator at courtside.

While shooting around casually at Brandeis, Lewis collapsed again and was taken to Waltham-Weston hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Poetry in Motion

He dances through our mind
A little faded now, but still clear
We remember
We will never forget
Timeless
He passes through our souls
We may not have seen
But we certainly felt
He was gone before we arrived and gone before we had the pleasure of meeting
But somehow we knew him
He was one of us
He played on our court
and danced in our rafters
Still does
Soft, sweet and gentle like silken, baseline jumpers
He loved us more than the game
The youth were his heroes
And he was theirs too
Uplifting, reaching
He made himself a star
Not only on a parquet floor
But with all of us
In every one of our hearts.

LEWIS 35

1965-1993

*B*eing part of a student group didn't exactly mean sitting behind a desk and thinking of new ideas. Just ask NUHOC's Matt Noonan, Tricia Kelly and Graham Ingallina, whose organizational commitments included tug-of-wars and everything the great outdoors had to offer.

STUDENT GROUPS

Academics and co-op kept most of us too busy to consider anything but lounging around an apartment to eat and watch television. But not everyone stayed away from campus when they didn't have classes or a job to attend to. Many, thousands in fact, lent their assistance to clubs and organizations on campus. This section is devoted to those who put in the extra hours and effort to make Northeastern a little less apathetic.

KΣ

Kappa Sigma opened its doors at Northeastern in 1992, making it the second youngest fraternity on campus. Remaining small with 25 members, it became one of NU's strongest organizations, carrying home a number of achievements awards in academics and leadership, including President of the Year.

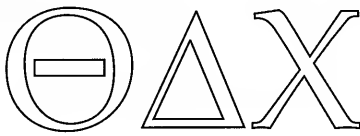

A group which has its origins dating back to 1400 in Bologna, Italy, Kappa Sigma embodied the true spirit of its national chapter, with a true mix of cultures and diversity.

Famous alumni include Robert Redford, Jimmy Buffet and Robert Dole.

Started in 1989, Theta Delta Chi quickly gained the respect of the Greek community. Headed by president Mark Rippa, the organization carted home several awards in 1993, including the Award for Excellence, the Community Service Award and Fraternity of the Year. The Northeastern chapter also was named Theta Delta Chi's inter-Fraternity chapter of the year.

The positives kept coming for this group, and no surprise. Theta Delta Chi is the 11th oldest fraternity in the nation and one of the most active.

Prided on its laurels of friendship, chivalry, and community service, TEP was a major contributor toward the fight against Leukemia and the plight of underprivileged children. Fraternity of the Year in 1992, TEP maintained excellence through closeness.

Beta Gamma Epsilon is Northeastern's oldest fraternity, started in 1919 by seven members of the U.S. Navy. With over 900 alumni and 20 members at the time of graduation, this group clearly made its presence felt on and around campus. From roof-deck parties to community work with the Harboridge House, BGE's impact was felt city-wide. Outings, Cape Cod trips, ski weekends and camping treks were just part of the activities Beta Gamma Epsilon took part in.

Academically, BGE did very well thanks to its own hookup with NU's library network.

Delta Zeta

Delta Zeta started with just 10 members in 1987 who were actually sisters of the Phi Kappa Tau fraternity. But, it didn't take long for the organization to reach the pinnacle of NU sororities. In our freshman year, the organization got its official start and by the time we were seniors, the group had risen to 52 members.

Founded on the principles of high ideals and academic standards, Delta Zeta grew in spirit as its size increased. The Rose and Green used its numbers to help the speech and hearing impaired, while making countless friendships along the way.

Sigma Delta Tau was founded in 1989, and although small in size, it became one of Northeastern's most influential sororities. Campaigning to aid in the prevention of child abuse, Sigma Delta Tau continually worked to help combat the violence plaguing America's homes.

Rich in tradition, the chapter got its start nationally in 1917. It's clear that with this group of graduating seniors, the first in chapter history at NU, the organization made great strides to become one of the more recognizable faces on campus.

Northeastern's newest sorority didn't waste much time in becoming one of its most popular ones. Founded in 1991, Tri Sigma was named sorority of the year in both 1992 and 1993. It also produced the homecoming queen in 1991 and 1992, the advisor of the year in 1992-1993, and an award for outstanding contribution to the university in 1993.

Strong in leadership, community service and campus-wide involvement, Tri Sigma sailed to success through a solid membership and dedicated leaders.

The first national sorority founded on NU's campus, Delta Phi Epsilon got its beginnings in 1969 and grew in popularity on campus. After starting with just 14 members, Delta Phi Epsilon boasted 40 members by our senior year, including 29 active members.

Symbolizing the spirit of sister unity, school spirit and freedom, Delta Phi Epsilon strived to bring its organization to the elite of community involvement. Helping those with cystic fibrosis and anorexia nervosa were just two of Delta Phi Epsilon's many commitments.

One of the oldest chapters in the nation, Alpha Epsilon Phi first made its appearance on Northeastern's campus in 1990. In that short span, A E Phi managed to cart home two Sister of the Year awards and a first place award for their homecoming float in 1992.

Assisting with victims of breast cancer, Alpha Epsilon Phi remained committed to the community as well as the university. Through their continued participation in Greek community, they earn the well-deserved distinction of being named most improved sorority in 1993.

LOUD AND CLEAR

TINY WRBB PLAYED TO ALL OUR NEEDS

"To most stations, requests are an annoyance. To us they're the reason we stay on the air"

- Scott Souza, General Manager

Understanding WRBB was as simple as driving three miles from the University. The station faded from the airwaves.

Blessed with just 10 watts of power, WRBB did the only thing it could - it played to the requests of Northeastern's students. Despite its miniscule scope, WRBB was a masterpiece of programming, with all types of music, talk shows and game coverage represented.

Variety was the key element to RBB's success. After its morning show, the station kicked in with Level Groove, a roots and reggae program from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Then, from 1 to 5, Boston's Spice handled requests for all types of music, ranging from rock to heavy metal to early 80's to soul. One of its most popular formats came at 5 p.m. with Radio Bliss, a combination of alternative rock mixed with the week's biggest college chart hits.

In the evening, if there wasn't a hockey or hoop game to cover, WRBB's format made the smooth transition to Soul's Place and then to slow jams after midnight on Visions.

Chris Burt

While much of the formatting was pre-planned, WRBB gave a chance to many rising DJ's to strut their stuff in ad-lib manner. Many of RBB's talk shows and request hours were well versed, though mainly unrehearsed.

The smallish scope never seemed to bother those at WRBB. Commercialization was frowned upon and big name pop music was not its ideal medium. But setting trends was. Much of WRBB's music laid the groundwork for future successes like Soul Asylum, which got its start mainly because the small outlets played them first.

The idea to stay away from selling out helped WRBB land big interviews with underground mega superstars like Chuck D., House of Pain, KRS-One and Digable Planets. Just goes to show that staying out of the commercial end has its advantages.

The work of Souza, program director Chris Adams, music director Kristi Bartlett and news director Chris Perkins made it all possible for 104.9 FM to reach beyond its limits.

CROWD PLEASERS

NATIONAL SPOTLIGHT SHINES ON CHEERLEADER

Collegiate cheerleading was not confined only to the sidelines of university games. The co-ed squad provided spirited support and contributed greatly to the overall athletic atmosphere of Northeastern.

Hard work and constant practice paid off for the 1993 Cheerleading squad in Dallas, TX as they placed eighth out of 25 teams in the NCA National Championships on Jan. 4, 5 and 6.

The team consisted of six men and eight women, all full of school spirit and a common commitment to being their best.

"We were one of the few squads to come from the Northeast, so we were a major underdog," said Coach Lorrie Wright, "but I think it really pumped the team up because they went out there and gave the best performance of their lives."

The Huskies placed in the top 10 for only the third time in school history, giving their team a reputation for being more than just an extracurricular club.

"All the teams that beat us were from the South," said graduate student David Sentnor. "Cheerleading down in the South is considered a sport, where as here we are a student activity."

The team earned their bid to compete in the Nationals by placing second overall in regional competition at Boston University, August 1993.

The squad then went to Dallas to compete in the semifinal round where only 10 schools were selected to continue to the finals. Northeastern went up against 25 schools to qualify for the finals.

"Competing in the Nationals makes us want to work harder because we can see that there are teams that we can compare ourselves to," said Captain Becky Bourassa. "If we see a team that is better than us, then we say, 'Well, we can strive to be like them' instead of trying to obtain an invisible goal," she said.

The team held fundraisers and contributed their own money to make the trip, but they also received some major donations. "It's a lot of hard work and practice," said Bourassa, "but anyone can do it."

THE FIRM

PRSSA RAN ITS OWN SHOW WITH "THINK INK"

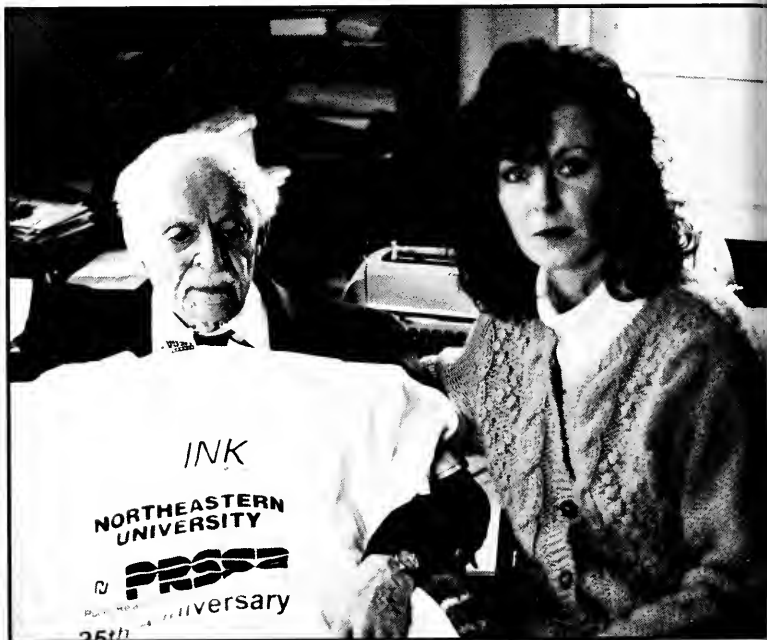

Classes, co-op, and campaigning ... the life of a Northeastern PRSSA member.

As the only student-run public relations firm in New England, Northeastern's own Public Relations Student Society of America has had success beyond the classroom and co-op jobs.

The NU chapter of this national organization was small but effective in their work. They began with a concept that taught the members how to be professional before it was a necessity — after graduation. Here it was just for fun, and the experience they found was rewarding.

Beginning in 1991, the PRSSA originated "Think Ink", a real firm dealing with real clients, real problems, and real success. Work in the firm gave the members a chance to strengthen their resumes, and to build on what skills they already had.

At the beginning, Think Ink took on mainly campus related clients. The campaigns were small, but they provided a strong base, and as the firm gained experience the number of clients increased. One of Think Ink's first major clients was Joyce Chen restaurants, in which the whole campaign was developed and resulted in both local and national newspaper coverage. From there, Traci Pena spent some very valuable time learning about public relations with the Father of Public Relations, Edward Bernays.

the list grew to both paying and pro-bono clients.

In 1994, Think Ink clients of note were Double Dee, In Full Effect, American Youth Hostels, Kelley Chunn Associates, Wild Wiggly Wear and Massachusetts Board of Real Estate Appraisers.

Under the guidance of faculty advisor Kelley Chunn, and as a result of the hard work the staffers put in, the NU chapter of PRSSA gave the Northeastern Public Relations students a leg up on their competition after graduation.

STRIKING A CHORD

NU BANDS HIT ALL THE RIGHT NOTES

If you went to the games, you would see them — the dedicated few that played for the Huskies ... not on the teams but in the stands. They didn't play halfback, or center. They played the tuba, the drums and the saxophone.

The Northeastern Bands were collected under one big university umbrella, but existed in many different forms. The Pep Band was the most visible of the bands, playing at many events including football, hockey and basketball games. Trying to inspire some school spirit at Northeastern was a difficult task, but the Pep Band added the necessary noise to the gymnasium when the crowd lacked vigor. Taking musical direction from student, their purpose was to encourage crowd involvement at sporting events ... when in fact there was a crowd. They also participated in other Boston area events such as the Special Olympics, Veteran's Day and Memorial Day parades.

The Concert Band was a student-run group conducted by a faculty advisor that performed and provided an outlet for students that enjoyed playing and studying music. Under the hand of Director Allen Feinstein since 1990, the Concert Band gave concerts for those students who appreciated their music.

The Jazz Ensemble and Composer's Collective were both run by Professor Bill Lowe. These two programs arranged to have professional musicians come to Northeastern to teach the players by example. The students and professionals created a unique sound and a unique program. This contributed significant diversity to the Band, and generated a learning-conducive and synergic atmosphere.

The diversity of the separate groups were necessary to those members of the university who wanted to broaden their experiences beyond work and the classroom — from students who participated, to those who just came to listen, to the professors who took time to teach and conduct. The practice took time, but the efforts were well-worth it, judging the finished sound.

CLEANING HOUSE

ENVIRONMENTAL ISSUES SWEEPED UP BY S.E.A.

Greener pastures and cleaner oceans.

In a world sometimes ignorant to the pollutants that harmed nature, the Students for Environmental Action, or SEA, stepped in to help achieve the above.

SEA was not only there to increase awareness about the environment, but also to actually make things more environmentally sound. And its scope was not solely isolated to our 55-acre campus.

As part of its core of challenges, NU took on Hydro-Quebec, the sixth largest multi-national corporation in the world. Hydro-Quebec had plans to build a massive hydropower plant in Northern Quebec near James Bay. Citing human rights violations and destruction of ecosystems, NU's alliance along with several other area colleges encouraged divestment of bonds from Hydro Quebec. The result was that Harvard, Tufts, Dartmouth, BU, and Wellesley all divested their bonds away from HQ.

On campus, the group became very high profile through its media connections and its willingness to go into the dorms to recruit.

With 14 members strong, SEA drove into the residence halls and started The Green Cup. The Cup was a challenge to all dorms to see which could conserve their water, heat and electricity best. The top dorm with the best results from March through May won an ice cream/barbeque party. Not a bad gift for something so positive.

Another task of SEA's was putting together the Green Wave magazine. Founded in the spring of 1993, the quarterly purposed to informed students of environmental issues ranging from legislation to the group's projects. As of graduation, the magazine had published more than 2,000 copies at a clip.

The future holds its breath on the environmental issue. But for SEA, the drive to clean up the earth remained strong.

Proposals for major projects included creating an Environmental minor, something NU desperately needs considering its location in a somewhat polluted city and its push toward campus improvement.

NUHOC FOUND SERENITY OUTSIDE CITY

NUHOC! We did it all ... and had FUNN doing it. Backpacking, skiing, canoeing, death hikes with Zack, and biking to the lodge with bananas up the ying and up the yang.

We went white-water rafting, sky-diving, and some even attempted ski-diving. We went caving and had endless rock-climbing trips to Hammond Pond, Quincy Quarries, and the rock gym.

Many great friends were made, friendships that will last a lifetime. NUHOCers will remember midnight hikes up MT. Mooselaki, "Hat trick weekends", the outhouse at -10, BANANA'S, 12-hour death march to Cannon MT., the death sled, and the "jump", Our House, Pratt St., and Ashford.

Of all the wonderful memories from our years in NUHOC, our fondest memories will be from our Lodge; Winter Carnival, Work weekends, festering, NewCommers, and New Years.

Memories from the Lodge radiate farther than the NUHOC community. They spread into the many student groups and faculty/staff who visited our home in the White Mountains.

Long live JG.

ALL THE NEWS...

NU NEWS STACKS UP AS TOP N.E. WEEKLY

Since 1926, Northeastern students have been informed and entertained by the same source. They have been able to get the low-down on university happenings from the university president to the SGA, while at the same time laugh at misspellings and incredibly dumb mistakes.

That source was, and always will be, the Northeastern News. While the students of the university poked fun and were angered by the contents of the campus weekly, the News became one of the top college newspapers in the country.

The Northeastern News was named the best non-daily newspaper in the region by the New England Newspaper Association, and also brought home a National Pace-maker award from the Associated College Press, making the News one of the top 20 weekly papers in the country.

While not always mistake-free, the News was able to dispense information to its readership — the students.

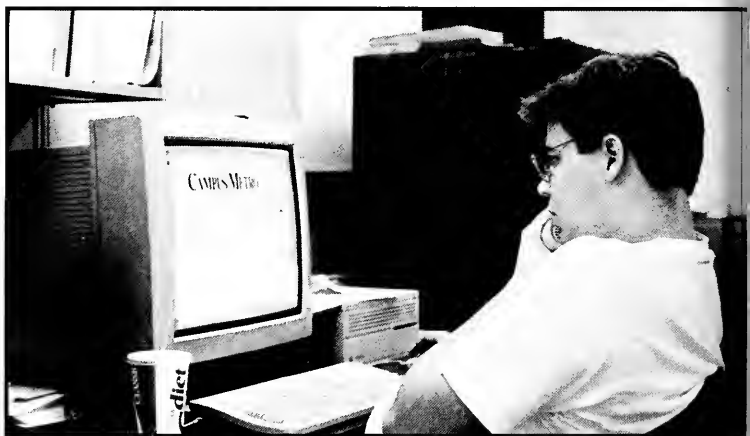

In 1993-94, the News covered Bill Clinton at Northeastern, the death of Reggie Lewis, and the continuing saga of the Ell Center Renovations.

In our five years, the Northeastern News was the main source of many events that affected the students at the university: the death of Mark Belmore, the eternally frustrating Beanpot hockey tournament, the tragic beating of Brad Giles, and the annual tuition hike.

Through the efforts of editor Jason Lefferts, Tracy Johnson (advertising, especially), and the persistence of seniors Derek Matson, Tracy Verfaillie, David Exum, Heidi Goldstein, Doug Read, Gerry Brown and Ryan Young, the Northeastern News did a complete 180-degree turnaround, taking an oft-laughed at paper and producing one of the nation's premier publications.

HELPING HANDS

FENWAY PROJECT MADE NEEDY TOP PRIORITY

Northeastern University is based on the principle of learning by doing. Cooperative Education was a paid way of learning, and many of us adhered to that idea. But there were some students and teachers that went beyond the paid work. For them, there were rewards greater than a weekly paycheck.

You can't talk about community service at Northeastern without mentioning the Fenway Project. Over 45 agencies had volunteers placed in community service positions by the Fenway Project in the greater Boston area.

The volunteer experience was an invaluable one for the NU students that participated. Because there was such a large base of volunteer opportunities, almost any student's interest could be matched. Some students worked doing blood research at a major Boston hospital, while others coached afternoon basketball teams made up of inner-city youths.

The opportunities were endless. The resources were not. The biggest source of volunteers came from work-study allotted by financial aid to students. Unlike the proverbial useless, know-nothing work-studies that did their homework on the job — these students put their effort into real positions that made a huge difference to the communities of Northeastern and Boston.

In 1994, The Fenway Project offered an after-school program for children in Mission Hill twice a week.

With the senior citizens from homes in the Feway/Roxbury area, The Fenway Project sponsored day trips to New England malls, restaurants — even a trip to Cape Cod in the summer. They used the university buses during regular business hours.

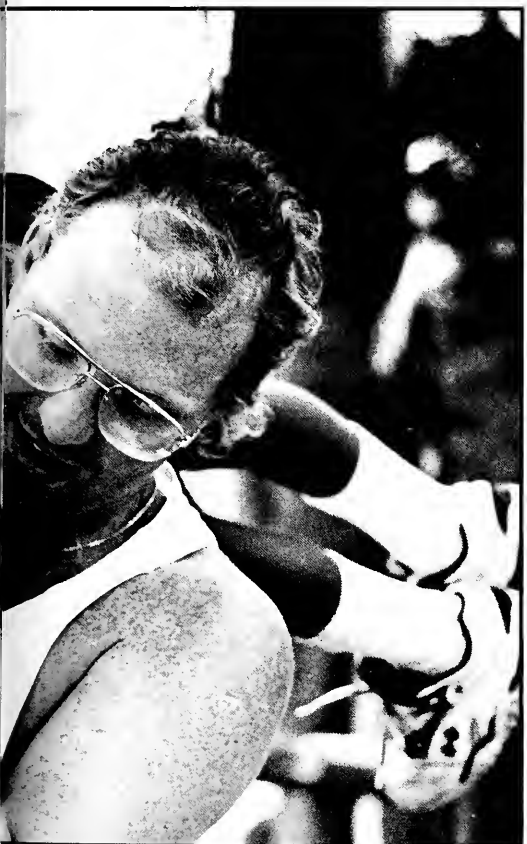

The volunteers from the project also sponsored bi-monthly dances for the developmentally delayed from homes all over suburban Mass. The homes supplied their own qualified staff members, but The Fenway Project coordinated the dances and invited Northeastern fraternities and sororities to attend as well. These groups, as well as some human service classes were on hand to provide refreshments and dance partners.

These students found out that they could get paid for volunteering and that experience was worth more than they ever expected.

LAJORITY RULE

SGA FLOURISHED BEHIND STRONG LEGISLATION

The Student Government Association worked diligently during 1993 and '94 to bring numerous changes to the university.

Led by President Katy Zeidler, the senate passed several important pieces of legislation. The most important resolutions included:

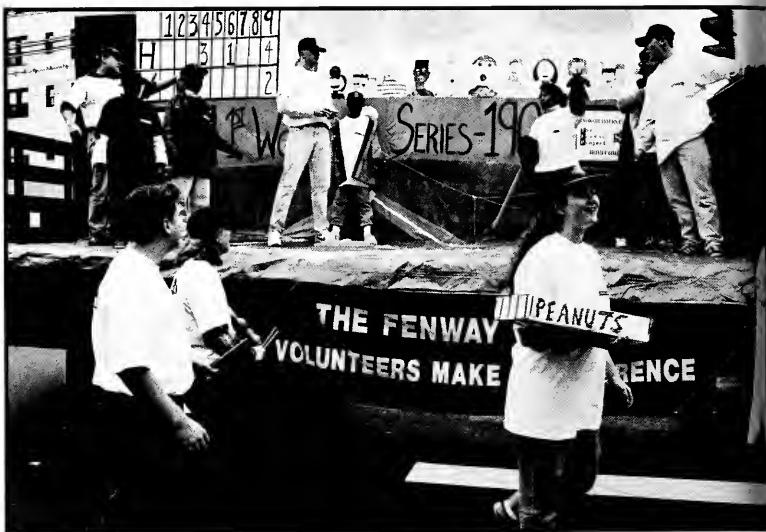

- the implementation of a system through which food left after catered events would be donated to charity rather than discarded.

- a request for a policy concerning non-compliance with TCE legislation.

- the establishment of a buffer time of coverage in the insurance plan for graduating seniors.

In addition to working on legislation, the senate worked with other student groups such as the Northeastern Black Students Association, Hillel, and NUBilaga to sponsor events on campus.

Probably the most important project that SGA developed was the new election process for senators. After working several quarters to perfect the procedure, the university finally saw its first elected senate in the Fall of 1994.

DaVo

SGA teamed with The Fenway Project to capture the 1993 most creative Homecoming Float.

But who believes in all work and no play? To ease the tension of the the workload, the senate participated in several uplifting activities.

SGA built a float for the Homecoming Parade in conjunction with the Fenway Project. The float, based on the first World Series, was named most creative float at the homecoming game.

In addition, the senate went on a winter at the NUHOC lodge where they went hiking, played games, saw the first snowfall of the year (of many), and strengthened their friendships.

MARCHING ON

WOMEN'S CENTER HOT ON HEELS OF EQUALITY

The Northeastern Women's Center spent 1994 trying to "recognize and seize" the same power that has "traditionally been denied" women since the women's movement first began in the 60s.

When Anna Kornilakis, Susan Jhun and Rachel Beaton took over the group in the spring of 1993, the Women's Center hadn't been involved in the NU community in two years. They sparked a new interest in dealing with the issues of today's society — health issues, economic issues, political and social issues facing women.

With seminars on self-defense and receptions to honor Boston's 'Leading Women', this small group — not just women, but men as well — brought empowerment and a positive environment to the women of Northeastern.

The Center was a place where students could find support, equitable treatment and concerned people with whom they could discuss current issues. A forum led by the Women's Center discussed a topic that many members felt needed to be addressed — sexual harassment. With pressure from the Women's Center, the NU Co-op Department made emotional and legal counseling available for those victims that had been harassed while on co-op. Then it went on to create the Sexual Harassment Network, widely publicized across NU's campus.

Not just concerned with what was happening on Northeastern's campus, the Women's Center also participated in Boston affairs such as the Jane Doe Walk. This was sponsored by the Massachusetts Coalition for Battered Women and state-wide. It raised awareness and money to support battered women's shelters. They raised a total of $800 and took part in the effort to "keep all women safe."

On Jan. 21, 1994, the Center celebrated the 21st anniversary of Roe v. Wade, the landmark decision of the Supreme Court to legalize abortion, with a candlelight ceremony. The wind was strong for the middle of the winter, but the participants' spirits were considerably stronger than the flames of the candles.

March is Women's History Month, and the Women's Center concentrated much of its effort into organizing a full week of events celebrating women. This celebration included guest speakers, exhibits and movie screenings.

Due in great part to member Nicole Ulrick, Advisor Carol Lyons and Vice President of co-op Jane Scarborough, the Co-op Department published "The Women's Advocate." This was a directory of contacts and supporters of women's issues on and off campus — including everything from health concerns and bookstores to future publications.

Throughout 1994, the Women's Center brought important issues to the forefront of the university's attention. The Women's Center continued its success by making a vital contribution to the growth of women on campus.

SEEING THE LIGHT

RELIGIOUS MESSAGE DELIVERED BY FAITHFUL

College was a time of discovering who you were, academically and socially. No matter what your denomination, religious life at Northeastern invited you to "Discover the journey ... Inward and Outward."

Northeastern's religious life was all-inclusive ... from those who practiced their religion adamantly to those who only had a quiet faith in an elusive higher power. As NU students moved through the chaotic daily life in Boston, they might have been motivated to reflect from time to time on their own inner growth as well as on the academic growth they came here searching for.

They might have questioned what made sense to them, what provided meaning to their lives, what gave them purpose each day — and Northeastern's Religious Life office might have given them a connection with others who shared their views and needs.

There were many opportunities for students to participate in various religious practices, right on campus.

Each organization had its own special activities and objectives — each one unique to its students. The Urban Quaker Group took action against urban violence and focused on issues that were important to the urban community of Northeastern.

The Hindu Student Council provided students with opportunities to learn about the Hindu heritage. The Islamic Society helped Muslim students fulfill their Islamic duties while adjusting to the university environment.

The Campus Crusade for Christ tried to help fulfill Christ's Great Commission to "go make disciples of all the nations." It was involved in informing students in an intelligent, reasonable yet personal way, how the claims of Christ were relevant to college students at Northeastern.

The Episcopal Chaplaincy met for mid-week services and held dinner meetings, creating a personal relationship between the members while sharing their faith.

The Inter Varsity Christian Fellowship welcomed students from all denominations with the goal of developing strong Biblical values.

The B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation was representative of the Jewish community at Northeastern. They held a variety of student-planned activities including film series and community outreach to senior citizens.

The Orthodox Christian Fellowship was a diverse group of students from all different ethnic backgrounds focusing on the teachings of the New Testament. The Roman Catholic Community comprised the largest student religious group on campus.

The Christian Student Union tried to find and implement God's purposes for them. It led students to commitment to Jesus Christ, trained students in effectively sharing their faith, involved students in area churches and led them in service to the community.

The International Students, Inc. was an inter-denominational which served international students. It sponsored bible study, discussion groups, local sight-seeing and educational trips and tours.

The Lutheran Ministry in The Fenway served Lutheran students, staff and faculty offering a variety of programs ranging from retreats to opportunities to participate in community service.

If you were looking for a student group to join, a place of worship or just someone to share your faith and questions with, the NU Religious Life office provided a place for NU students to find the answers.

GRADUATES

With your diploma in your hand, you look to the future. Though it was difficult, it was time to say goodbye. Look back on these pages fondly and recall the memories - the people, the friends who made those five years magical. These were the final days of your youth. May the NU experience and The Class of '94 be forever ...

The Cauldron Yearbook sends its thanks to Senior Challenge coordinators Donnella Brown and Erin Daly for their dedication and perserverance to this worthy cause and for their dedication to the Northeastern student body.

COLOPHON

Volume 74 of the Northeastern University Cauldron was printed by Jostens Printing and Publishing Company at State College, Pennsylvania. Our publishing representative was Robert Murphy. The 336-page publication had a press run of 1,700 books.

The cover is an off-white smoke style, edition stamped with black fabricord material #535. Gold foil #873 adorns both the front cover and binding. The endsheets are 10 percent Elephant Hide B. Tempo Gold #873 and Elephant Hide B were used for borders in the opening section and on division pages.

Most of the type used for the book is Times Roman, including the type which appears on both the cover and binding. Zapf Chancery type appears in several sections, predominately in the captions of opening section and in Fraternities and Sororities pages. We also used Bookman, Palatino, Linoscript and Mistral. Though text sizes varied from 8 points to 650, we used 12 point as a standard for text, 10 point for captions and 9 point italic for photo credits. Headline vary and some were condensed to between 50-90 percent.

Senior portraits and photos for the opening section and homecoming were taken by DaVor Photography, Bensalem, Pennsylvania. Our photography representative was Caren Orlick Korin.

The yearbooks were a fall delivery and were distributed free of charge to all graduating seniors.

The Cauldron had a budget of $44,500 with $19,700 in revenues coming from Northeastern University. Other revenue came from senior photos and through advertising.

Editorial content (and we know there's a lot of it) does not necessarily reflect the views of the University.

FINISHING TOUCHES

We remember the long dorm nights, the long classes and lectures, and the endless hours spent with our noses in books. So there was no question that when Senior Week hit, we went crazy. Freedom from school and everything for that matter gave way to fun in the sun, at The Tent, the Red Sox game or the Quad Party. It was unforgettable. We remember some of those memories, some memories of the past, and most of all, you graduates who made this book possible. Here's the grand finale - nothing but faces of graduates.

This was a test every step of the way, the toughest of my career at Northeastern. That's right, Dr. Blanch, tougher than any assignment you ever handed us. With one broken down computer and a budget too small to provide us with some of the niceties that could go into a yearbook, we put this thing together. I hope this is everything you expected and something you won't forget.

Our objective was to make this the highest quality book Northeastern has ever put out, both in design and textual form. I think we accomplished that. We strived for consistency, but most of all we tried to paint the real picture of life at NU. Too often, yearbooks become laden in something that is not reality, namely the positive side to every story. In 1994, there was a lot NU did right, and a lot it did wrong. I hope you understand this stance.

This yearbook was produced with the student in mind. It is supposed to serve as a lasting memory of a lot of things that happened on campus. Unfortunately, our staff was too small to cover all the bases. But we made a conscious effort to keep you, not parents or relatives, in mind. It is your remembrance and your peers' remembrance. Often, we as students were "just another number", second to everyone else. Not in this publication.

I would like to thank those who sweated with me in putting together this book, especially the tireless efforts of my workstudies Sean McClory, Ginny Cowan and Lauren Kolbeck. Special thanks to my advisor Lou Conrad, who kept me sane long enough to finish this and provided countless support through tough times. Thanks to Bob Murphy at Jostens (Go Bruins) and Caren Orlick Korin of DaVor for making sure everything went our way all the time; my co-editor, Shelagh, for coming back and saving me from a nervous breakdown. You were truly outstanding; Tricia Kelly, Eustacio Humphrey, my photo editor Laura Ann Taylor and Daphne Loiseau; Gail at SBI Photography for saving us after the fire; and Northeastern's womens sports, which still haven't gotten the recognition they deserve. Thanks also to Dave Elkins of Maxwell's and Seth for never carding me, and my friends (you know who you are) for making this the best experience of my life.

Lastly, I'd like to thank my father Gary for dealing with financial aid on a regular basis and living this red tape experience with me. For all his support and love and understanding, Dad This one's for you!

1994 Cauldron

Shelagh Braley/Co-Editor

The Cauldron office, the little square room on the fourth floor of the pre-renovation Ell Center has been my home since I arrived at Northeastern two years ago. I loved the familiar way all the chairs made my back hurt, the way the (asbestos-filled?) air made my nose run like crazy, how the phone rang with seniors asking, 'Is it too late to get a portrait taken???' three days before graduation... 451 EC was my personal prison — but I loved it.

This book is a reflection of what I have learned. I don't claim that I had any fantastic ideas or that I ever made a deadline without having a breakdown first. All I can say is that, working on this book, I learned an incredible amount about good journalism from my co-editor.

Chris, this book would not have gone to press if it weren't for your great talents and ability, not to mention your patience. I am so glad we got through it without you killing me. I have a million memories of the time we spent in the office, and I hope you know I'll never forget you.

When the Cauldron moves back into the Ell Center after the summer semester, only the title will be the same. A new staff and crew will put out the next edition, and the history of this office will have been destroyed. We penned and marked our frustrations on the cement walls, leaving a legacy of support for the next editors... just so they'd know they weren't alone in their lunacy.

The managing editor from 1991 wrote, "A little pain never hurt anyone. Rob Schailler, may he rest in peace, please!"

Kelly Durkee, the editor-in-chief in 1990, had these words of wisdom to offer... "He who laughs, lasts." We did have lots of laughs, even some strange hysterics at two in the morning when nothing was really funny.

My 'Senior Buddy' in 1993 wrote, "Kim is great, she feeds us chocolate cake." We never had chocolate cake, but we did have plenty of Burger King and DAKA specials, which always made me question why I even bothered having an appetite.

I have been thinking all year what I will leave as my legacy on these walls, but now I realize everything will be gone as soon as the renovations begin. All I can do is record my thoughts and thanks in this book, and hope that we'll remember what it used to be like. These are the memories that will last... the ones on these pages.

So my optimism will be eternal, and recyclable... Even when you're falling on your face, at least you're still moving forward.
